About Banks
Queen Mary's Party
Some Laws, and Others
2 Women Hanged

By Arthur Brisbane

BORROWING FROM RUSSIA, everybody seems to be developing a "plan" of five, ten or more years.

Calvin Coolidge, reminding us not to "let words supplant ideas," refers to our blessings. "A multitude of banks are ready to issue money and to give credit." So they are, but unfortunately many of the multitude are also ready to blow up and disappear.

One thousand three hundred and twenty-six banks failed in this country in 1930, and in the last ten years 6000 have gone under, robbing seven million depositors of nearly two thousand million dollars.

President Hoover says we "need greater protection for bank deposits," and we do, MUCH greater.

An old poker player, when he raised the betting, used to say, "The way to discourage vice is to make it expensive." The way to discourage bank failures is to make them dangerous for those responsible. In Germany, when a bank fails, the president usually commits suicide. Here he hires a good lawyer, and goes to Europe, to relax.

Queen Mary of England, good and kind, will give a big ball in Buckingham Palace, something she has not done in seven years. Her idea is to "give a happy evening to young members of British society, for whom there have been few dances this season."

That must be very pleasing to the "young members of British society," and interesting for the 100,000 British coal miners, out of a job. There isn't, unfortunately, any ballroom big enough to provide dancing space for the 100,000.

The case of Al Capone, who pleads guilty of violating income tax and prohibition laws, shows what the government can and cannot do. It can enforce its income tax laws, and so the Treasury Department seizes Capone. It cannot enforce prohibition laws, and Capone's business will go on as usual while he is in prison, directed probably, by himself, through lieutenants.

In Hungary, Rose Chordas, aged 38, and Amelia Szabo, 43, poisoned four members of their families. They were executed when she saw the gallows, and never heard her sentence read. The other fainted, listening to the sentence. Both, unconscious, were literally carried to the gallows by the hangman, who did his work with tears running down his cheeks.

An apprentice hangman, Zotos, learning the tricks and seeing the real hangman tremble and weep profusely, changed his mind about a profession.

That execution will interest civilized historians of the future, when they write our history.

United States Steel was weak again yesterday, and the steel industry showed a drop of 2 per cent in mill operations, to 38 per cent of capacity.

It should be remembered that steel recovery must follow other recoveries.

To help steel stocks the railroads must have money to buy what they need and automobile demand must increase. Building takes money and men with money will hardly order steel for office buildings or hotels of doubtful profit, while they can buy stocks for half what they are worth.

The match industry is annoyed when Uncle Sam buys all the matches for his army from Russia. The candy industry here and in Britain says Russian price cutting menaces its existence.

It is all as sad as can be, but one of two things must be done, either shut out imports from Russia entirely, or learn to compete with Russia.

Assuming that all Russian labor is slave labor, as you are tearfully told, we must make machines that will compete with Russia's slaves.

No Indian slave of the old days, pulling the cord of a punkah to fan his sleeping master, could compete even at five cents a day with one of our electric fans, or do the work as well.

The railroads ask the Interstate Commerce Commission for an increase in rates that would yield four hundred million dollars a year, warning that diminishing railroad profits threaten the soundness of trust investment in railroad bonds.

There is a better reason for giving the railroads more money. If they don't have it, they will be compelled to reduce wages.

HATHAWAY'S PAL STICKS TO TALE

Shouts Mark Long Grilling of State's Star Witness by Defense

By WIN BROOKS
Boston Evening American Staff Correspondent

Newport, R. I., June 18—There were four sensational developments today at the trial of Elliott R. Hathaway, Fall River playboy, for the murder of Verna E. Russell.

These were in the cross examination of Galvin and the testimony of his mother and wife:

1—The defense sought, and failed, to obtain from Vernon Greenwell, government's star witness, an admission that Hathaway was one he didn't know how to handle. Greenwell's figure it was.

2—The defense sought, and failed again, to wring from Galvin an admission that it was due to his urging Hathaway fled from Fall River after the crime.

3—The state introduced evidence to show that on his flight, while in New York, Hathaway sought liquor and the night life of Greenwich Village as the police sought him.

4—Galvin's mother testified that Hathaway told her he thought Verna was dead because "she didn't seem to move and her hands seemed to turn purple." That Hathaway and Galvin drank gin before they went out on the night of the murder.

COURT PACKED

The sun beat into the packed courtroom at the ninth day of trial of the son of Rep. Louis E. Hathaway, of Massachusetts, for the alleged strangling of his pretty, blonde "girl friend of a night."

It was hot. The cross examination of Galvin, who yesterday testified that Hathaway took him to the nurse's body in Winward lane at Tiverton and there admitted hitting her after an argument about an interne to whom she

University Announces the Contributions Made Since the Last Commencement

Gifts and legacies of $14,421,697.58 were announced today by Harvard University at the close of its commencement exercises.

They were received during the year and were in addition to an additional $150,000 presented today by the class of 1906, celebrating its 25th reunion.

Announced by President A. Lawrence Lowell at alumni exercises that followed the graduation, the gifts were greeted with great acclaim as each was read.

The largest was that of Edward S. Harkness, original donor of the new Lowell House. He gave $4,-310,239.45 to complete the work in addition to the $3,000,000 already granted.

Four other grants went into seven figures, the largest $2,261,-800 from the estate of Stuart Wyeth.

LIST OF DONATIONS

The estate of Walter Hastings established a fund of $1,280,193.03; the International Education Board, $1,001,973.76, and the estate of Artemas Ward $1,025,150.62.

Other gifts were:

Two Hundred and Fifty Associates, Harvard Business School $130,531.55.

Commonwealth fund $34,025.

THE REAL STARR

Soulful-eyed Starr, the playgirl who sought all the thrills of life at any cost and paid the price of a dreadful death. This photograph of the beautiful former Brookline girl was her favorite picture. Her lure is obvious, yet in the eyes appears the sadness of a child who fears something unknown, a fear that apparently drove Starr at a dizzy, dazing pace through all the soul-destroying episodes that came to a climax in her murder or suicide. This picture was obtained exclusively by the Evening American through its unexcelled news and picture-gathering facilities, which have brought about many notable scoops in the recent past.

Starr's Letters Tell of Blighted Romances

New York, June 18—The love life of beautiful, neurotic Starr Faithfull today was further revealed as a bewildering series of contradictory moods.

Stanley E. Faithfull, stepfather of the slain girl, made public a mass of correspondence which, summarized threw a brilliant light on the erratic — almost psychopathic — workings of Starr's amorous mentality.

In her letters, written to her mother, to friends in America and abroad and to her sister Tucker, she told of her affairs in London; her futile pursuit to London of a ship's doctor, who scouted her story they were to marry.

HOW SHE DESCRIBED MEN

Starr's letters to Mrs. Faithfull show her a girl gifted at phrase-making, as when she says one resembles "a match before it's lit, and another, a "plump bird huddled up in its feathers with big, wondering eyes." But she was baffled by her love affairs—her "amours," she called them jestingly.

She had, she wrote, in September, 1929, almost forgiven "D. B."

"He takes me drivin., in the evening and is so devastating to look at. I've never seen anything like him.

"I'm in in in in in, my troubles are over amen. amen

"When I have my money for shopping I will be the happiest person in London."

Starr, or Bamby, as she was known to her family and man friends, had just settled down at the Commodore, 4 Pembridge Square, after being asked to depart to the nearby Grey Friars Hall, following a noisy ruckus "ha," startled the sedate families up from the country.

But Starr, broke, could not move

PROVIDENCE TELEGRAMS SOUGHT AS STARR CLUE

Message to Family Traced in Hunt for Slayers of New York Beauty

Hunt for the slayers of Starr Faithfull, whose gay-sad beauty haunted Greenwich Village and the transatlantic liners, and whose death the authorities insist was murder, turned today to Providence when New York police asked a probe there of mysterious telegrams. Other leading developments today in the mystery were:

1—State coast guards asked to check tides and ocean currents off Long Beach, N. Y., where her body was found.

3—Within 24 hours police have launched search for three girl friends of Starr, all missing from their usual haunts.

4—Lunchroom employe says he saw Starr with a taxi driver near the Chanin Bldg., 42d st., where others saw her in a drugged condition. He described the cabman.

5—Inspector King revealed Starr wrote of a "fully premeditated design of suicide," to Dr. G. Jameson Carr, but added he had other information which made him refuse to abandon the murder theory.

MESSAGES WANTED

New York police today asked Providence authorities to make a special search for messages that may have been sent from the latter city to the family of the exotic girl whose mad career took her from Boston's fashionable homes to scenes of revelry on both sides of the Atlantic.

Hint was given in the telephone request that a theory was held that the wires had some connection with

THATCHER COLT SOLVES THE MYSTERY OF THE "MURDER OF THE CHOIR SINGER"—BEGINS TODAY—PAGE 16

a blackmail plot which only a few weeks before her death had resurrected Starr's strange past with a wealthy Boston man.

Chief Inspector John McGuire of the Providence department received the request from Capt. McVay of the New York detective bureau.

It immediately revived the story that Elizabeth Faithfull, sister of the slain girl, was in Providence on the day Starr's body was found on the sand at Long Beach, N. Y.

Was Providence the headquarters of the plotters who were trying to cash in on Starr's affair with the Boston millionaire?

CHIEF TURNED DOWN

Did Elizabeth go there seeking to learn for her family who was thus trying to profit by their secret? And to learn if they had anything to do with her sister's disappearance?

Capt. McVey asked McGuire to make inquiries regarding telegrams sent between June 1 and June 8 from Providence to New York.

Telegraph company officials refused to let McGuire see their records and referred him to the head offices in New York. It was after relaying this information to New York the Providence chief inspector did such his inquiry.

Investigating authorities in New York earlier this week disclosed that two telegrams signed "J" were sent to Elizabeth Faithfull from Providence, one on June 7 and the other June 8.

An employe at the Providence-Biltmore hotel, not only identified a photograph of Elizabeth as the girl who registered, but left without taking a room, on June 8, but recognized a picture of Starr as girl who had been a frequent guest there in the past.

BOAT RIDE THEORY

This employe disclosed today he had been informed by officials that he might have been a Providence-New York boat that Starr was hurled from, if she was "taken for a boat ride." But the place where her body was found, on the outside of Long Island, seems to eliminate boats passing through Long Island Sound.

Dr. G. Jamison Carr, ship's doctor on the Cunard liner Franconia, who received letters from Starr informing him that when he read them she would be dead, made the following statement today on the Laconia, on which he is returning to New York to tell his story:

"I am returning to New York in the interests of justice, in the interests of the Cunard Company, in the interests of the medical profession and in the interests of myself.

EXPLAINS HIS STATUS

"It should be understood that my knowledge of Miss Starr Faithfull was due to my professional status as a medical officer of the Cunard line, and I must have the proper release by the authorities from my professional obligations before making a full public statement."

The Laconia docks at Boston Sunday and at New York Monday. Whether Dr. Carr will leave the vessel here to speed to New York by airplane or train could not be learned.

Dr. Carr, while referring only to his professional knowledge of the slain girl's affairs, is known to have rebuffed her after she became wildly intoxicated on the Franconia on May 29, and the letters to him indicated she was strongly attracted to him.

The slain girl's stepfather, en route from New York to Mineola today for questioning by Inspector King, when asked if he believed Starr a suicide, said:

"Absolutely not. She was murdered."

He then wrote the following and handed it to the Boston Evening American reporter:

"Why do you not point out the story given by the chauffeur, Edelman, which throughout shows many inconsistences?

"The autopsy conclusively proved some of his statements to be false. Therefore, why should any credence be given to anything he has said?"

MAY BE IN BOSTON

Edelman is a taxi-driver who said he drove Starr and a man to the Mayflower hotel on the day she disappeared, and that she had evidently been drinking. The medical examiner found no alcohol in her organs.

"I am going to Mineola at request of Inspector King," added Faithfull. "Mrs. Faithfull and Starr's sister will not be questioned any more. The pressure and strain on the family has been tremendous and it will be a great relief to all when the cause of Starr's death is determined."

When Faithfull arrived at Mineola, Dist. Atty. Edwards was absent, and it was rumored he had left for Boston, but this could not be confirmed.

Inspector King told the Boston Evening American reporter detectives "are gone to Westchester county to interview Mrs. John Barr, 68 Valley rd., Larchmont.

While still speaking clearly, interjecting remarks and submitting to questioning himself, Inspector King told of a conference with John Hokk, employe of the Hanover lunch on 42d st.

This luncheon is near the Chanin Building, where two persons reported seeing a girl of Starr's description in a stupefied condition, as if from drugs, on the afternoon of June 5.

Hokk told Inspector King he saw a girl who resembled Starr with a taxi driver early in the evening near his lunchroom. He said he could identify the tax driver.

SUICIDE, SAYS CABLE

King then made public for the first time the contents of a cablegram from London quoting a letter sent to Dr. G. Jamison Carr, the Franconia's physician. This quotation was:

"Fully premeditated design of suicide within next 24 hours."

"I want it distinctly understood," said King, "that my mind is open yet to either homicide or suicide. I have in my possession other information which causes me to say that."

He then announced it had been decided to request the coast guards to survey the tides, currents and influence of the wind off the southern shore of Long Island to determine where a body would float under conditions prevailing June 5, 6 and 7.

Called to a telephone, Inspector King returned with this statement:

"Detectives—I cannot say they are ones sent to see Mrs. Barr—have just reported to me and we have definitely placed Starr Faithfull in the ladies' waiting room of the Grand Central Station on Friday, June 5, the day she disappeared, at 1:30 p. m."

SEEN IN STATION

"We can say that she was seen there alive and well at that time by a very reliable person. Apparently she was going somewhere—from the information we have"

Faithfull interrupted to say:

"I can add that she quite often went to the Grand Central station and there took one of those little rooms to arrange her hair and so on."

Inspector King:

"This information came from a very reliable person who made a Mediterranean cruise on the steamship California with Starr Faithfull."

Q—Why did this person not come forward with this information before now?

King: Because this person did not desire any undue publicity.

Q—Did this person talk with Starr?

A—No. They passed, that's all.

Q—When was that cruise, Mr. Faithfull?

Faithfull: In 1924.

King: Do you mean that?

Faithfull: Oh, no, no. I believe it was 1927 or 1928.

STORE GIRL SOUGHT

King: We have received the names of three women in 24 hours. We have located none of them, but we have learned that one of them, Olivia Harland, was a girl of 24, employed at Lord & Taylor's department store on Fifth ave. (It was on Lord & Taylor stationery that Starr wrote to Dr. Carr.) Miss Harland is on vacation. She left after Starr was found dead and we cannot find out where she went, except that she went west. She is in the clothing department.

Faithfull: I am sure that Starr did not know anybody at Lord & Taylor's.

Q—How would you know that?

Faithfull: No, no, no. I know it definitely, that Starr knew nobody there.

Q—Mr. Faithfull, will you explain Elizabeth's visit to Providence on the day Starr's body was found?

A—It was purely social, planned some time before. The authorities agree it had no bearing. It's of no interest to the public.

Q—Were you in Providence that week-end?

A—No.

HE WAS IN BOSTON

Q—Where were you, in Boston?

A—I was in Boston Thursday, June 4.

Q—When did you return to New York?

Q—What time did you arrive?

A—I got home at 8:30 a. m.

Q—What time did Starr leave home? A.—About 9:30 the same morning.

Q—In that hour, did you see Starr for any length of time? A—Yes, most of the time she was in the same room with me.

Q—Was there any indications in her actions that she was in trouble?

A—No, both her facial expression and manner, and in the conversation, were natural and normal. She seemed to be free from any depression and her actions did not indicate she might be contemplating self-destruction.

Q—Just what did she say? A—I don't recall. Her conversation was one that might have taken place at any time. Casual and normal conversation. Therefore, I do not remember it. But I do know it was the conversation of Starr as her natural, normal self.

SHE WAS HAPPY

Q—Do you recall any of it?

A—In substance I recall she told me she had been out on Thursday and had a very enjoyable time and felt happy. She asked me for a dollar, stating she intended to have her hair waved. I gave her the dollar and as I did so, Mrs. Faithfull spoke up and told Starr she should go to the beauty parlor in the Grand Central, and she told her just how to get to it.

It had previously been learned that Starr made an appointment for 1:30 that day at the beauty shop but did not keep it.

King ended the questioning of Faithfull by the Boston Evening American representative by saying he had some questions to ask the stepfather in private.

Faithfull interrupted again to say that another girl referred to by King as being sought for questioning—a Miss van Wessupp—probably was a member of the family living below the Faithfulls in the St. Luke's place residence.

"Starr never had anything to do with that family at all," he added.

Dist. Atty. Edwards confirmed reports that two Boston men will eventually testify before the Nassau County grand jury.

A SERIOUS STARR!

MYSTERY MAN IN WOMAN'S DEATH IS SOUGHT

Chauffeur Held in $10,000 Tells of a Stranger Asking Him About Her

Fall River, June 18—Leo F. Bouchard, 30, a chauffeur, was held in $10,000 bonds in district court today, pending a complete police investigation into the murder of Miss Marianna Gauthier, whose battered body was found between two mattresses in her Wade st. home.

Bouchard who was taken into custody as a suspicious person pleaded not guilty to that charge and the high bail was set at the request of the police.

When he was questioned, Bouchard told the police a tall man had asked him about Miss Gauthier and mentioned he was going to visit her. Two other persons, Timothy J. Lyons, of Bedford st., and a 26-year-old boy corroborated Bouchard's story of the tall man to the police.

The police are searching for the stranger described by Bouchard.

TANKER ASHORE REFLOATED

Norwalk, Ct., June 18 (AP)—The 1800-ton, electrically propelled steel oil tanker Tydol No. 2, from Bayonne, N. J., for Portland, Me., with 500,000 gallons of gasoline, went aground early today off Sheffield Island. She is in command of Capt. H. Anderson, with a crew of 18 men. She was refloated this afternoon with the aid of a tug. No damage was done.

She was stranded 200 yards from the W. B. Webster, three-masted schooner, from Boston, which went on the rocks May 12.

Starr's Last Kick Posing in Nude

By JOHN H. NOONAN
Boston Evening American Staff Correspondent

New York, June 18—Posing in the nude for Greenwich Village artists was a recent adventure in the weird life of the beautiful and cultured Starr Faithfull.

A number of prominent artists questioned by Boston Evening American representatives admitted the 25-year-old girl, whose bruised body was cast up by the Atlantic at Long Beach a week ago, had recently sought to pose for them "in the altogether."

ASHAMED OF POSE

She first came to his studio six months ago, and he told her to return. She again visited him a month ago. This time he told her he wanted a model to pose undraped for his Conception of Maternity. Starr agreed, but as she proceeded to take her pose she seemed overcome with shame. She continued, apparently, because of her interest in the subject.

"I have known every human experience except motherhood," she told me. It was her puzzled conception of it that interested me. She looked with such wonder upon the mysteries of human life. She told me that she could never become a mother. This she seemed to deeply regret.

CHANGING MOODS

"While I painted, Starr kept up an incessant chatter. She was alternately charming and silly. She observed that a mother's love is the only unselfish love a woman is capable of. Then suddenly she demanded to be admired. She depended on the plaudits of others. I told her she was the best model I had had in years. Childlike, she seemed appeased.

"Starr posed most of the afternoon—some day late in April. She asked me for a cigarette when she had finished. She surveyed the sketch I had made. I wanted her to return to pose, but she never did. Once she telephoned me, and another time she stopped by to see me and, because I was out, she left a brief note, which, as near as I remember, told me she would get in touch with me after New York friends, which were on the rocks May 12.

DISLIKED AMERICA

C. W. Anderson, artist, living at 47 Washington sq., has already told of his experience with Starr as a model. Today he told the Evening American that she was "too neurotic a type," to succeed at posing. She had refused to pose for him in the nude.

"She heaped abuse on this country and enthused about England. She spoke of her own artistic abilities and she expressed a desire to take up painting seriously," said Anderson.

STARR'S RECKLESS PURSUIT OF LOVE TOLD IN LETTERS

"Amazed news your letter," she said, "mother cabling Starr change hotel immediately. Making plans for her care. Terribly sorry. Love, Sylvia."

ORDERED FROM HOTEL

Mrs. Faithfull ordered Starr to change hotels at once. Stanley E. Faithfull, the stepfather, sent his check for $100. From the Grey Friars' management came a receipt plus polite regrets that they could no longer harbor his stepdaughter.

Starr moved to the Commodore, at three guineas ($15) a week, with huge gardens, a tennis court, a ballroom and (strange and remarkable fact) plenty of telephones and bathrooms. Her quarrel with "D. B." patched up, she could write that her "troubles are over, amen."

Starr shortly afterward wrote a second letter, chatty, gay, affectionately candid, but at the end the note of frustrated romance.

"Have you seen Bill at all? The Laconia got in here days ago. I am completely and absolutely cynical where fascinating men are concerned, and the greatest conviction in that 'watched kettles do not boil.'"

"I had a letter from him several months ago saying he hoped to see me in London. I wonder amen.

"Did I ever tell you that a man named Lord B. wanted me to go to Budapest (how in h—ll do you spell it?) Also D. B. begged me to live with him in his new flat.

"As I told you, I have become very platonic. It's a great state to be in."

This 23-year-old, a well born American girl, disillusioned and slightly malicious, wrote an otherwise entertaining letter. She wanted to do her fall shopping. She could make her room "perfectly knockout for a few pounds."

"I have been invited to a big tea at the Berkeley and I must have clothes for that and other things which are coming up. Fall is, of course, the big season."

AN EFFEMINATE MAN

Starr had met an effeminate man. She described him "creature," saying: "I could never describe so peculiar a person, with his sloping forehead, watery blue eyes, perfumed handkerchiefs and manikin hands."

She remarked the ancient condescension of the British toward their American visitors. She shared, in a way, their distaste for the "American accent."

"I am getting so that I cannot stand my own mates from the States, their voices are so American."

Words not acceptable in London she observed were date—in the American sense of appointment—bloody and bug.

"No one ever uses the word bug. One must say 'insect.' I shocked Grey Friars terribly when I asked the page to kill the awful bug which was in my room."

WANTS MOTHER TO COME

"If you don't want to spend too much money," she wrote, "we could move another bed into my room and be pretty comfortable. I have a big wardrobe the size of a summer cottage. The outside of this I am plastering with photographs of everyone I meet. PLEASE spend October with me. PLEASE!!! I will meet your ship in Liverpool. Thrills!!

"As for me life is entirely pleasant. If Mr. Stackpolle (manager of Grey Friars), was better looking I would keep coals of fire on his head by asking him to dinner at the Commodore. He looks exactly like a match, before it's lit."

"About my amours. I have none at present, as I am going through a very platonic phase (starting after my row with D. B.). The last time I saw him I told him he looked like a plump bird huddled up in its feathers with big wondering eyes. I am having him to dinner tonight and afterwards drive in his new car.

"My other 'lovers' are away. I had a blind date the other night with a friend of Derck Dawson, but he was too fragile to appeal to me."

The letter opened with an amusing appeal for her mother's attention.

"The first thing I advise you to do today is to close those impid orbs for about five minutes and vividly reflect upon the charms of your eldest daughter. Then sit down and write her all the news, both momentous and unromantic. In spite of the fact that I'm thousands of miles away, and separated by bottomless quantities of H2O, I crave news of you all."

HER ENGAGEMENT

About a year before this, the Faithfulls, at their Cape Cod home in Centerville, were pleasantly surprised when Starr burst in from New York with the news that she had promised to marry "Dr. R. L.," Cunard ship's surgeon. She had agreed, she said, to follow him to London, sailing on the Franconia, and they were to be married the day of her arrival.

Mrs. Faithfull, who had been hurt in a motor accident, urged Starr to delay her departure, but the girl refused. It was the practice in the Faithfull household to yield before Starr's tempests. The psychiatrists told them that was one way to restore her normality.

She departed in a flurry of good wishes for New York, sailing on the Franconia. But the Faithfulls were not wholly satisfied. Mr. Faithfull cabled the doctor, asking his pedigree, giving as reasons that the society editors would wish to know it when news of the marriage of a well-connected girl of Colonial lineage to a Briton got out.

The doctor cabled briefly that he was entirely "in the dark" about any proposed marriage to Starr.

Mrs. Faithfull overtook Starr with reassurance, wirelessing her on the Franconia:

"Know everything. Keep your head. Will deposit money weekly with Cook, London. Keep expenses low. Cable our address after arrival. Love. Mother."

The mother cabled Starr:

"Doubt L—'s intentions. If I am right forget him. Will cable money only when I receive cable from you stating circumstances and your plans. Love. Mother."

Starr countered with a barrage of cables, demanding money, first on one day, September 5. "Do you hate me. Bless your dear heart. Reply, Starr." And, "Am getting serious. Positively must have money. Sorry. Starr."

DEMAND MONEY

Refusing to disclose her plans, silent about her fiance, Starr demanded $200, $300 at once, on September 8:.

"Imperative you telegraph through Cook's urgently $200. Will be different in future."

Mr. Faithfull on that day appealed to the Secretary of State. Starr, he said, had sailed for the purpose of being married in London. Her supposed fiance had disclaimed knowledge of the plan.

"As sh should have sufficient fund to carry her for at least a week or two, we feel she has not met Doctor L.—and if she needs money it is to carry out some plan which we might properly disapprove of."

He urged that the embassy in London interview her for the "real facts." A consul called to see Starr at the Hotel Cecil and reported cable:

"Miss Faithfull was interviewed by a consul on that date (September 10) and it is the consul's opinion that she is genuinely sorry for her actions and that she has no money.

"She says that Doctor L— is not responsible for her actions and that they have no intention of marrying at present. Arrangements were made for some moderately-priced lodgings."

On Sept. 12 a telegram over Secretary Kellogg's signature suggested to a State Department agent in New York a way to transmit funds for the "repatriation" of Miss Starr. On Sept. 14-17 a wireless from the Cunarder Laconia reported Mrs. Faithfull at the home in West Orange:

"En route homeward. Love. Starr."

Starr lived in London in 1927, briefly in 1928 and in 1929 and 1930. Violent incidents, grewing out of her confused, tortured quest at normal sex happiness, marked all the London sojourns. Perhaps her death, too, was an incident in the quest.

BOOTLEGGERS FLOURISH ON THEIR BEATS

Enforcement Army to Be Increased and Mop Up All Liquor Dives

By THE MASKED REPORTER

A new federal drive to "mop up" the liquor traffic in Boston and suburbs is about to be launched.

Plans for the campaign are based on reports made by a small army of "under cover" men who have been working here for weeks under orders from Prohibition Director Amos W. Woodcock.

One of the chief features of the drive, it was learned, is the fact that a check has been made on Boston policemen on whose routes bootleggers flourish apparently without molestation.

A close watch has been kept on certain police officers, and detailed reports have been turned in concerning them and their districts.

AFTER DRUG STORES

Prohibition Administrator Jonathan Lewis admitted that the "educational department" of the dry forces has been active in this section of late.

Enforcement officers have been given detailed instructions on the method of procedure in searches, raids and seizures.

TEACHING AGENTS.

"We have an educational department that runs 12 months in the year, sometimes in Washington, and sometimes in Boston and other cities," said Lewis. "You can't expect me to tell you what it is planning to do."

Asst. U. S. Atty. Elihu D. Stone, in charge of liquor prosecutions in federal court, said:

"I do not like to say what we are going to do or talk about it until it is done. We like to do things first."

It was learned, however, that the "under cover" men have been busy in and around Boston for some time and that the forthcoming drive will be based on their discoveries.

13 MORE COMING

It is said they have been checking the disposition of liquor cases in the State courts, together with their other activities.

It is understood their number will be swelled shortly by the arrival of 13 more, to work here under authority of Director Woodcock.

It is known that the federal authorities are not satisfied with the prosecution they are receiving from the Boston police.

HOT WAVE IS ON WAY TO CITY

The forerunner of a heat wave which is gripping the west and southwest hit Boston today, sending the mercury on an upward climb expected to reach 85.

The official temperature jumped from 60 at 6 a. m. to 75 at noon, at which time the weather zone said there were indications of much hotter conditions to come.

After yesterday's maximum of 69 the mercury dropped slowly during the night, reaching a minimum of 60 at 6 a. m., when the upward climb started.

Two Jamaica Plain Children Injured

Two Jamaica Plain children were injured, one of them critically, in falls today. Charlotte Getz, 18 months old, fell from a second story window of her home in Lamartine st., fracturing her skull. At City Hospital surgeons expressed little hope for her recovery.

Frank O'Rourke, 6, of Jess st., playing on the iron fence around the hippopottamus house in Franklin Park, lost his balance and fell to the sidewalk. He was treated a City Hospital for lacerations.

BIG DRY DRIVE STARTS JULY 15

Washington, June 18 (AP)—The zero hour for the biggest sustained offensive in prohibition history against leaders of the illicit liquor industry was set today by federal officials for July 15.

Exactly 15 days before that date, Prohibition Director Woodcock said 350 new dry agents will be concentrated in a dozen cities from coast to coast for an intensive two-weeks' training course.

Added to the present force of more than 1500 to make it the biggest and best trained federal dry army in history, he said, they will be instructed specifically to concentrate on the large scale commercial violators and the higher-ups of the liquor gangs, leaving the speakeasy and small-time bootlegger principally to local enforcement.

The concentration of men for training in the impromptu schoolrooms that will spring up quietly on that day will be, roughly, as follows: Thirteen in Boston, 62 in New York, 50 in Philadelphia, 25 in Richmond, 26 in New Orleans, 28 in Cincinnati, 55 in Chicago, 23 in St. Paul, 20 in Kansas City, 11 in Denver, 14 in San Francisco and 14 in Seattle.

PASTOR HANGED IN HIS CHURCH

Dallas, Texas, June 18 (AP)—B. P. Brown, supply preacher and employe in the baggage department of a Dallas hotel, was abducted by four men early today as he waited toward his home, stripped of his clothing and trussed up to the chandelier in the North Dallas Baptist Church.

Brown drew up his feet and rested his weight on the pulpit from which he has preached many times. His outcries brought residents of the neighborhood to his rescue in time to save his life.

Brown reported to officers that he and the Rev. H. F. Marler, pastor of the church, had received numerous threatening letters during the last three months.

The four men stripped Brown of all his clothing, tied his hands together, then pulled his feet up to meet his bound wrists. In this manner he was jerked up to the chandelier by a new rope in which a hangman's nooses had been tied. The men left him suspended there.

Buenos Aires, June 18 (AP)—The population of Buenos Aires is 2,148,719, according to statistics just released.

W. J. PATRON IS DISBARRED

William Jennings Patron, prominent attorney and twice candidate for district attorney of Suffolk County, today was disbarred by Judge Stanley E. Qua in Suffolk Superior Court.

The decree ended a fight begun against Patron a year ago by the Boston Bar Association when the lawyer was in his last campaign for the prosecutor's post.

Irregularities in handling funds belonging to clients were charged in the Bar Association's petition for Patron's disbarment. Alleged diversion of clients' funds to his own use and general charges of malpractice, deceit and other breaches of professional conduct were attributed to him.

Among the complaints against Patron was one from John J. Buckley, who declared the attorney had given him $300 worth of bad checks in settlement of a personal injury suit.

PAJAMA WOMAN GOES TO COURT

Clad only in pajamas, covered only by a topcoat, loaned her by Quincy police officers, Mrs. Ethel Baker, 29, of Pleasant st., East Weymouth, startled spectators in Quincy court today when she appeared before Judge Albert E. Avery on charges of drunkenness and drunken driving. She pleaded not guilty and the case was continued until June 25.

George Kelsey of Fresh River ave., Hingham, arrested with Mrs. Baker on the same charges, was also ordered to appear for hearing on June 25.

Patrolman William Ferranzi stopped the couple when he saw their automobile zig-zagging along Washington st. last night. The woman wore beach pajamas which were rolled above the ankle. The topcoat was loaned so that she would not have to appear in court in disbabille.

COURT UPHOLDS HOME BREWERS

Chicago, June 18 (AP)—The search warrant that heralded an intended campaign of the government a year ago against sellers of the ingredients and paraphernalia for making home brew was quashed today by U. S. District Judge George A. Carpenter.

Clarence Darrow and William F. Waugh opposed the warrant.

"You, know," observed the judge after he had heard the motion of quash, "this home brew has been characterized by a judge sitting here at one time as a fireside companion' for winter nights."

Then he sustained the motion to quash the search warrants and said he would hear the arguments on return of seized goods July 10.

MANY PROTEST RATE BOOST

Washington, June 18 (AP)—Protests against the proposed 15 per cent increase in freight rates piled up today before the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Telegrams and letters, many of them addressed to President Hoover from officials, business houses and private citizens denying the claim of the railroads that an emergency exists warranting increased rates.

They demanded almost without exception that the commission reject the proposal. Most of those addressed to the President asked him to use his influence to prevent an increase.

Among those to protest were Dunbar and Bohlman, Pittsfield, Mass., investment bankers, who said the roads should negotiate wage reductions instead of rate increases.

26 INJURED AS TROLLEYS HIT

Twenty-six persons were injured and traffic in the Tremont st. subway was tied up during the rush hour this morning when two Elevated cars were in collision near the entrance to the subway.

Women became hysterical when the collision occurred, jolting them from their seats and showering them with broken glass.

According to Elevated officials an Egleston-North Station-Tremont st. car had stopped a few feet inside the subway while repairs were being made to its trolley. This car was in charge of Motorman Thomas J. Norton of 1465 Dorchester ave., and Conductor J. A. Donahue.

A second car, bound in charge of Motorman Michael Glynn of 21 Child st., and Conductor Francis Hufnagle of 55 Main st., both Jamaica Plain, followed it.

Elevated officials said the first car standing car carried 55 passengers, and the second 46.

According to the officials, sun in the eyes of Motorman Norton obscured his vision as he entered the subway, and he was unable to see the stalled trolley ahead.

2 HIT, DODGING FIRE TRUCK

Two elderly women were slightly injured today when, fleeing from the path of fire apparatus in Blue Hill ave., Dorchester, they became confused and were struck by an automobile.

Mrs. Lena Turow, 60, of New York, and Mrs. Rose Swartz, 60, of Havelock st., Dorchester, were taken to a nearby doctor's office by L. S. Hunt, driver of the car that struck them.

Mrs. Swartz' back was sprained and Mrs. Turow sustained severe bruises.

STRANGE PLANE SEEN OVER SEA

Valencia, Irish Free State, June 18 (AP)—Aviation circles here were puzzled today by reports from a French trawler of an airplane sighted about 225 miles due west of Land's End, England, flying in an easterly direction.

The appearance of the plane at such a point could not be explained and efforts to identify the ship were being made.

VANDERBILTS IN GUNPLAY

Trying to come between these two would be precarious business, the Reno divorce colony learned. They are Mr. and Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jr. Vanderbilt seized a pistol and prepared to do battle with Peter Arno, cartoonist, after he saw his pretty second wife stepping out of the Arno car.

VANDERBILT IN GUN ROW OVER WIFE; SILENT

Reno, June 18—"Regrettable and unfortunate," said Mrs. Mary Vanderbilt.

"False and absurd," declared Peter Arno.

Thus, the principals expressed themselves today on the assertion of Samuel Platz, attorney for Vanderbilt, that the author of "Reno" and ... sion of the famous Vanderbilt family, because of alleged attentions to Mrs. Vanderbilt, had "gone gunning" for Arno, whose cartoons amuse New Yorkers.

Simultaneously, Police Chief J. M. Kirkley admitted Arno had requested police protection because of alleged threats from Vanderbilt.

SEIZED A GUN

According to the version of the affair given by Platt, Vanderbilt, incensed because Arno had escorted Mrs. Vanderbilt home from a party Sunday night, seized a gun and started down the street after Arno.

Vanderbilt was impeded by a lame foot, his attorney said, and realizing the unfortunate position in which he was placing himself, retraced his steps to his home, where upon examining the gun he found it was not loaded.

The cartoonist said he would probably have a statement to make following the conference with his attorney, referring in the meantime that the entire episode "was absurd."

MRS. VANDERBILT UPSET

Mrs. Vanderbilt was located at the California avenue home of Mr. and Mrs. True Vencill, prominent in the younger social set at Reno. She said:

"I am upset over the affair, but I am sure it is just a foolish incident that will pass quickly."

Asked concerning a possible rift between herself and her husband, she repeated:

Vanderbilt, located at the Riverside hotel where he is apparently staying at present, would not confirm reports he had attended the Sunday evening dinner affair nor discuss any of the circumstances involved in the case.

Under stress of visible emotion, Vanderbilt asserted:

"I got Peter Arno his first job. I introduced him to Mrs. Florence Rice Smith—who is a friend of mine by marriage. I brought him into our group here. I helped him in a hundred ways."

and economize on service. They cannot pay their bills with anything but money.

And even if wages are not actually "reduced," the "station agent" changed to a "clerk," receives automatically less pay than before, a bad thing for his family. The amount cut from his income is about enough to cut off his automobile, if he has one, which hurts the gas, tire and automobile industry.

The railroads, their prosperity essential to national welfare, should get more money, while seeking for ways and means to meet changed conditions. The fact that the railroad speed record for the United States, from Chicago to Buffalo, is almost 40 years old, indicates that there may be room for improvements.

PLOT TO FRAME HIM CHARGED BY SWEEZEY

Police Commissioner Artemas B. Sweezey of Malden, who holds office in defiance of an ouster order from Mayor William A. Hastings, today through counsel charged the mayor had sought to "frame" him.

In a statement made public by Attorney Maurice R. Flynn, Sweezey said Mayor Hastings was actuated by "frivolous, personal and political" reasons.

"The mayor has unlawfully, unjustly and improperly conspired with certain members of the Board of Aldermen and has secured their promise to vote for removal of Commissioner Sweezey in advance of and regardless of the evidence and the truth," the commissioner's statement said.

The friction between the officials, which began last April, will culminate next Monday night in a special meeting of the Board of Aldermen when Mayor Hastings will recite his charges that Sweezey was insubordinate, ignored the mayor's orders and guilty of conduct detrimental to the morale of the police department.

Sweezey demanded that the meeting be public.

MRS. JOHN HAYS HAMMOND DIES AT CAPITAL

Washington, June 18 (AP)—Mrs. John Hays Hammond, wife of the noted engineer, died early today after an illness of several weeks. She was 69.

Mrs. Hammond, daughter of the late Senator Nathaniel Harris of Natchez, Miss., married Mr. Hammond in 1890 and traveled with him throughout the world. She was with her husband in South Africa when he was sentenced to death for activities as a leader in the Transvaal reform movement in 1895-96 and aided in obtaining his release by payment of a heavy fine.

She was a close friend of the late Queen Victoria, and when Mr. Hammond was appointed special ambassador to attend the coronation of King George V in 1911, Mrs. Hammond distinguished herself as a hostess there.

ALLOWING FOR GROWTH

"Some people have said our object as Harvard was brick and mortar," he said.

"We have grown in building no more than necessary for the people who were in the university."

"At that time we had 2941 students, whereas today we have 5442, more than twice the number," he said.

"The teachers then numbered 354 and today 1717.

"Are you surprised that we need the buildings? We are not building uselessly and ahead of time.

"The inspirational values of the new houses and their beautiful surroundings are as good as a course in fine arts. The academic beauty and attraction along the river is of unusual value to the student.

"We are trying to mould men and make them worthy, morally and intellectually.

"We know Harvard will grow and all we can do is the best we can."

Following the announcement of the gifts, the election to the board of overseers, Harvard Alumni Association and Harvard Fund council were announced.

OVERSEERS ELECTED

George R. Agassis of Newport, R. I., William Phillips of Boston, Alleton Burr of Chestnut Hill, Frederick Winsor of Concord and Dwight P. Robinson of Philadelphia, Pa., were chosen overseers.

Channing Frothingham of Boston, Douglas Crocker of Fitchburg and George C. Clark of New York were elected to direct the alumni.

MUSSOLINI FOR CHURCH APART FROM POLITICS

Paris, June 18 (AP)—Benito Mussolini is quoted in an interview with Le Journal today as saying in effect that the people of Italy must render unto the state that which is the state's and unto the church that which is the church's.

The interview constitutes the premier's first public pronouncement concerning the current controversy between the Italian government and the Vatican over the closing of clubs affiliated with the Catholic Action Societies.

"I wish that there be religion throughout the country," he said, "and, that the children be taught their catechism. I will send them to communion in a body on Sunday in their basilla (fascist) uniforms or otherwise. For that I let the priests work; that's religion.

"POLITICS—THAT'S ME"

"The rest is politics, and politics—that's me. I will not permit that anybody, absolutely anybody, touch in any way that which belongs to the state. My formula is clear: everything within the state, nothing outside the state, nothing against the state.

"The child, as soon as he is old enough to learn, belongs to the state alone. No sharing is possible. Maybe this will be judged Spartan doctrine carried to an extreme. One cannot deny, however, that it is clear.

"We are in the process of reconstructing Italy—a great Italy. It is a colossal task such as I do not believe has often been tried. The antique city has nothing in common with his nation of more than 42,000,000 inhabitants."

"VATICAN OFTEN WARNED"

The Catholic Action Society and the Vatican had often been warned, he said, against political agitation toward the regime.

"At the head of the movement were found the failures and malcontents of the Populist party," he said. "They have it in for us. Perhaps that's natural. Their attitude made itself felt in the Catholic Action. The Vatican has been warned against the danger that policy holds for it—a reawakening of anti-clerical opinion which it well knows exists. Nothing was done. I acted."

Two women leaders of a Catholic club for young people were arrested at Poggiomarino, the newspaper Conservatore Romano said today, because a schoolgirl had defaced a picture of Premier Mussolini in a classroom copy book.

The incident occurred two weeks ago and when the authorities made an investigation the child admitted she had scribbled in pencil across the picture but the two women were arrested nevertheless on a charge that they had influenced her to do so. The Naples tribunal imposed suspended sentences of six months in prison.

Prisoner Taken to Dying Daughter

Brockton, June 18—Walter Gurry, serving a sentence at the House of Correction in Bridgewater, looked up hopefully last night when guards told him to dress and go to Brockton with them.

His joy was turned to sadness later, when he was told that his two-year-old daughter, Dorothy, was very near death at the Brockton Hospital after being struck by an automobile.

Eight Injured in Battle of Miners

St. Clairsville, O., June 18 (AP)—Eight men were injured today in a battle between mine guards and pickets of the National Miners' Union at the Florence mine of the Youghiogheny & Ohio Coal Company.

The fight started after 300 pickets had attempted to march to the mine, but were dispersed by tear gas bombs thrown by deputy sheriffs.

Welfare Jolted

GRID STAR SHOT BY POLICEMAN

Charlotte, N. C., June 18 (AP)—Lowell Mason, star Duke University quarterback and member of a well-known Charlotte family, was shot and seriously wounded here today by a policeman as he sought to escape arrest for drunkenness after an automobile wreck.

Police said the shooting occurred after Mason and two companions, State College students, had been taken to headquarters. Mason was said to have leaped out of a police car and fled down a side street.

Police Capt. Alex West, hearing brother officers crying, "Stop him," fired twice. He said he had intended only to frighten Mason.

Mason was arrested when the car in which he was riding crashed into a milk truck. Mason's companions were F. T. Dellinger and J. R. Wilkes, Jr.

Summer Recipe

SUPPER DISH

Add Gulden's Cream Sauce to 1 cup chipped beef and 1 cup vegetables.

CLEVER cooks would probably vote cream sauce the most useful recipe—so valuable for creamed dishes, soufflés, croquettes, etc. Try seasoning with Gulden's Prepared Mustard for wonderful new flavor. 3 teaspoons Gulden's added to 1 cup sauce gives double deliciousness to creamed dishes and makes these old favorites a new treat.

OFFICER'S SHOT HALTS MAN

Marlboro, June 18—After one shot in a half-mile chase early today, a man, who gave his name as Frank McDermott of Mechanic st., Marlboro, was arrested by Patrolman William Fitzgerald, of the Marlboro police, and placed under suspicion while another man still is being sought.

According to police, McDermott's arrest came about after Patrolman Fitzgerald noticed two men in the rear of the Ellis Motor Company on Main st. When Fitzgerald started toward them, both started to run in opposite directions. McDermott running down Ames pl. After Fitzgerald had fired one shot in the air, McDermott fell to the ground.

At police headquarters he refused to talk or tell the name of the other man now being sought. Whether or not they had broken into the motor company could not be ascertained.

Bathhouse to Open

HOOVER STANDS PAT ON VIEWS

En Route With President Hoover to Washington, June 18 (AP)—President Hoover was on his way back to the White House today, "appreciative" of the welcome given him by the people of the Central States.

On the last three days he has spoken as many times to vast audiences in Ohio, Indiana and, Illinois and been the central figure in receptions at the capital cities of all three states.

During his trip President Hoover laid down his program on which he is determined to stand. Confidants of the President asserted he will stand on the issues he has defined in this region and remain henceforth in his post at the White House. He has no speaking engagements for the next two months and his close friends are of the opinion his platform has been completed.

Relaxing from his strenuous three days, Mr. Hoover was on the rear platform of his special train early today to greet those whom he passed in retracing his route to Washington.

Leo Flynn's Widow Winner in Suit

Providence, June 18—In a decision handed down in superior court here today, Justice Edward L. Blodgett denied the right of Hubert J. Flynn to an accounting of the $500,000 estate of Leo P. Flynn, one time manager of Jack Dempsey.

The promoter's brother brought suit against Mrs. Kate Conley Flynn, Leo P. Flynn's widow, claiming that a partnership agreement had existed between the brothers for 20 years prior to the promoter's death in 1930.

Barre Judge Lost $300 in "Farm" Deal

Worcester, June 18—How a Barre judge was mulcted out of $300 three years ago was revealed today, George Wheeler, 63, arrested in Michigan, was arraigned here on an indictment on complaint of Judge John L. Smith of Barre, who said Wheeler disappeared after $300 was advanced on a proposition to turn the judge's land into an alfalfa farm.

Wheeler was given probation to make restitution.

JELLY AND JAM MAKERS USE REFINED CANE SUGAR

All over the country you will find housewives using refined cane sugar for making their jellies, jams and preserves. Experience proves that cane sugar insures ideal results.

The housewife who takes advantage of the low price of sugar, also the bargains in fresh fruit, can put away preserves for the winter at a real saving.

Canned fruit and preserves of all kinds belong in the diet. What's more, they make meals more enjoyable. Jellies are fine accompaniments for meat as well as a spread for bread, and canned fruits make delicious desserts and salads. Preserve with refined cane sugar. The Sugar Institute.

MADRID GETS VATICAN NOTE ON SEGURA

Madrid, June 18 (AP)—The Vatican's note of protest regarding the expulsion of Cardinal Primate Segura is understood on good authority to demand that the Spanish government rectify its procedure in dealing with religious matters.

Cardinal Segura, now in France, was said in the message to have returned to Spain at the express orders of the Pope. The note is in the hands of the Spanish foreign minister, Senor Lerroux and may be presented to the cabinet today.

He was quoted as saying he returned to Guadalajara from Rome on purely canonical business in compliance with his pastoral duty, "which I am violently prevented from carrying out. I shall raise the most energetic protest against the violation of my personal immunity because of unjustified detention by the police."

He said he was told by a private citizen that the government "would not guarantee his life in Spain half an hour" and that he, therefore, was required to leave in haste without money, clothing, medicine or even a prayerbook."

BEER BARON OF BRONX CAUGHT

New York, June 18 (AP)—Dutch Schultz, known in police circles as the beer baron of the Bronx, was arrested today, and a henchman Dan Amacio, was critically wounded in a street fight with two detectives.

Amacio and Schultz had been trailed along upper Fifth avenue, when they suddenly confronted the detectives, Stephen Diross and Julius Saike, and asked them what they wanted. Amacio had drawn his revolver.

Diross without answering fired three times at Amacio. Schultz ran away, but was caught and charged with possessing a gun.

Schultz, who has been blamed for beer-war killings in Harlem, became hysterical at the police station and required medical attention. Schultz was booked under his real name, Arthur Flegenheimer. Detectives say they found $18,800 in cash on him.

Told he was considered one of New York's public enemies, whom the government is now investigating, Schultz, said, "It's pretty fast work, getting my name in this."

French Socialists Hit Naval Building

Paris, June 18 (AP)—The Socialist offensive against the French naval building program was launched in the Chamber of Deputies today who attacked the policy of building powerful warships in view of the forthcoming disarmament conference in 1932.

August Reynaud ridiculed the idea of asking Parliament to vote 1,099,000,000 francs for laying down warships when it was certain one of them, a 23,000 tonner, would hardly be started before the Geneva conference.

She Had Nervous Prostration

"It helped to Save My Life"

"I REALLY believe that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound helped to save my life.

"Owing to bereavement I was reduced to nervous prostration.

"I could hardly bear anyone to speak to me and I had to lie down most of the time.

"Nothing seemed to help me until I read about your Vegetable Compound. From the very first it helped my nerves and I slept better.

"Your medicine is all you claim for it."—Dora Holstadt, 220 North Main Street, Memphis, Missouri.

Monks Escape; Play Leapfrog on Avon Roller Coaster

Avon, June 18—Three impish monkeys which have disorganized the amusement park from which they escaped here yesterday, were being sought today with dog catchers' paraphanalia.

The monkeys, two males and a female, got away yesterday while their cage was being cleaned. For a time they amused themselves by running around in the trees. Then last night when the park's amusements got under way, the simians transferred their attention to the whip and roller coaster.

While the admiring female looked on, the males hurdled the gondolas filled with young people and played leapfrog on the runways until driven off. The order went out this morning to capture them.

FULLER CASH IS LEFT TO AGED WOMEN

A bequest for the establishment of a home for "helpless, white American women of the Protestant faith" was made in the will of the late Mrs. Carolina W. Fuller of the Hotel Vendome, filed today in Suffolk Probate Court.

According to the testatrix, who died June 14, leaving an estate valued at more than $150,000, the rest home is to be called "The Haven." It is to be built in a suburb of Boston.

The stipulation further states that the women helped by this bequest and admitted to the home are to be "of Protestant faith other than Christian Scientists."

Many charitable organizations will also benefit by the terms of the will. Bequests of one and two thousand were left to associations, hospitals and institutions.

To Mrs. Maude Fuller Briggs, of Brookline, her cousin, is bequeathed $60,000. To G. Loring Briggs, her husband, a legacy of $5000 was made and to the Briggs children bequests of $1000 to the two sons and $3000 to the three daughters.

ADVERTISERS IN WAGE PLEA

New York, June 18 (AP)—The Advertising Federation of America asserted today in a resolution adopted at its annual convention that the widest possible distribution among workingmen of "an equitable share in the profits of production is necessary for business to realize its full development."

The resolution was a modification of a proposal considered by the resolutions committee. The original proposal was to stand flatly against wage reduction.

These new directors were elected: G. R. Schaefer of Chicago, Turner Jones, Atlanta, Ga., and Frank G. Huntress, San Antonio, Tex.

DO-X FLIES TO BAHIA, BRAZIL

Bahia, Brazil, June 18 (INS)—After a mid-way stop at Maceio for additional fuel, the German air liner DO-X landed here at 12:55 p. m. (11:55 a. m. E. D. T.) today, completing its 600-mile journey from Natal in 7 hours and 25 minutes.

A large crowd turned out to welcome the huge plane. The DO-X is scheduled to leave shortly for Rio de Janeiro.

German Communists Stone U. S. Consulate

Leipsic, Germany, June 18 (AP)—An attack on the American consulate by a mob of Communist youths, last night, was attributed by police today to resentment over the impending execution of eight negroes in the United States.

Ghandi to Work With Zeal for Settlement

Bombay, June 18 (AP)—Mahatma Gandhi said today that his acceptance of a Nationalist Congress resolution asking him to attend the second round table conference even if the communal question had not been settled was due to his "essentially democratic nature." He said he would work with all possible zeal at the conference.

New Yacht, Cargo of Rum, 4 Men Seized

New London, Ct., June 18 (AP)—The gas screw yacht Whispering Winds of Bridgeport, a new boat, with 500 sacks of liquor aboard was seized today by the coast guard. Her crew of four men were arrested.

The cargo was valued at $25,000. Shots halted the craft.

NAUTILUS NOW HEADING FOR QUEENSTOWN

EXCLUSIVE!

By CAPT. SIR HUBERT WILKINS

Copyright, 1931, throughout the world by New York American, Inc., Hearst Enterprises, Inc., and King Features Syndicate, Inc. All rights reserved. Reproduction prohibited in whole or in part.

Aboard the Submarine Nautilus at Sea, June 18 (via radio to London)—The Nautilus is now proceeding under her own power and making seven knots an hour, heading for Queenstown.

The towing line by which we were attached to the United States battleship Wyoming since our engines were disabled, two days ago while in midatlantic, parted at 5 o'clock yesterday morning and left us to work out our own salvation. The Wyoming, however, has not left us alone. She is acting as convoy and has emergency towing gear ready for instant use if required.

MAKING FAIR PROGRESS

We hope that we will not have to again avail ourselves of such assistance.

When we broke loose from the Wyoming, which was having considerable difficulty in making satisfactory headway with us in tow, our port engine was running. Thus, fortunately, we were able to make continuous progress and since then we have been making fair speed considering all our handicaps.

Our auxiliary engine is now running well and is charging our batteries effectively so that they are performing spendidly even under most trying conditions.

CREW EXHAUSTED

Practically the entire crew has been suffering terribly for the past two days with something that seems to be ptomaine poisoning, but all of them are carrying on bravely. Most of them have almost recovered from the severe symptoms though all are much exhausted.

At 8 o'clock last night, Greenwich time (4 p. m. New York daylight time), our position was longitude 20 degrees, 40 minutes west, latitude 48 degrees, 21 minutes north. (Approximately 300 miles from Queenstown.)

After we get to Queenstown, where if possible we will completely recharge our batteries, we will proceed to some English port, probably Newcastle, where we will effect a renewal of our cylinders and armature in our main motors.

Doctors Advised to Take Up Advertising

Chicago, June 18 (AP)—The retiring president of the Chicago Medical Society, Dr. James H. Hutton, believes "medical men should open their minds about advertising." In an address last night he said:

"Important sections of organized American medicine have attacked advertising as an evil. This has been due, I now believe, to lack of comprehension or of information. Advertising has proven one of the greatest weapons for progress in modern times."

Woman Injured as Auto Hits Pole

As Private Luther C. Hawkins of the Marine Corps, stationed at Camp Curtis Guild in Wakefield, was driving along Main st., Malden, last night, his companion, Mrs. Nellie J. Moody, 45, of Forest Hills, L. I., N. Y., suddenly requested him to look at something on Waite's Mount.

He did so, lost control of the machine and hit an iron pole. Mrs. Moody was removed to Malden Hospital in a critical condition.

THE PATH OF FLAME

LIFE STORY OF STARR FAITHFULL

By L. E. LAVEY

Copyright, 1931, by the Boston Evening American. All rights reserved.

CHAPTER SEVEN

It must be apparent even to the most casual observer that Starr Faithfull was artificial even to the point of callousness in the early phases of her love life.

There was about her a cold detachment—a calculating appraisal—a careful balancing and counterbalancing of values. She took men for what they were—both literally and figuratively.

Her almost abnormal interest, even as a child, in sex life was something which she kept strictly to herself. From the early days when she read the erotic works of Havelock Ellis, philosopher of the glorification of the body, even until that dismal day her tortured body was found on the sands of Long Beach she dwelt within the microcosm of self.

Schoolmates, teachers and friends knew her only as a normal, healthy girl with a normal girl's interests. They did not recognize her as an exponent of sex glorified. But she was that—as men the world over could testify if they would.

At Rogers Hall, select boarding school for young ladies in Lowell, no inkling was had of the yearnings and desires—the unconquerable emotions stirring in her youthful breast.

AHEAD OF YEARS

The few boys with whom she came in contact there held no charm for her. They were school boys, merely—she was even at that age a woman of the world, with a woman's experiences behind her.

Miss Olive S. Parsons, then as now principal of the exclusive school, has declared herself as being unable to recall a single instance of Starr going out with boys or men during her stay at the institution.

She has painted a picture of Starr as a healthy, normal girl, alive to all the interests which occupy the sex during the adolescent period. But let Miss Parsons speak for herself.

"She was a girl, or rather nervous temperament, but was no different from many other girls. She appeared to be healthy and vigorous, but, of course, you can't tell much about girls at that age.

"Starr was interested in swimming and hockey, but all the girls here are and she did not specialize nor distinguish herself in any sports. She was a very fine girl, coming from a fine old family and our relations with her were perfect in every way."

In the light of what has since been revealed it would seem that Miss Parsons knew only one side of the girl's character—the side she presented to the world. But the Starr the world now knows was even then vastly different from the healthy, normal girl of 17.

During that period and shortly after Starr was revelling in sex experiences which took her all over northern New England and parts of Canada.

These formative years in no small measure helped to develop that studied artificiality which weathered the most ardent love-making of men intoxicated with her exotic beauty.

That studied aloofness with which she viewed the world of men served her in good stead through many hectic years—carried her on and on in a mad whirl of fast living—through it all her heart remained her own until that fateful day when real, womanly love came into her life. It was that love which her best friends believe led to her untimely death.

WIGGLESWORTH LEFT ESTATE OF $680,000

The wills of three prominent residents of Greater Boston were allowed in Norfolk Probate Court today.

Augustus Hemenway, Jr., and John Richardson posted bonds of $1,200,000 each as executors of the $870,000 estate of the late Augustus Hemenway. Milton philanthropist, who died May 23. With the exception of bequests of $50,000 each to Harvard University and the Boston Museum of Fine Arts the estate was left to the family.

The estate of George Wigglesworth of Milton, father of Congressman Richard B. Wigglesworth, amounted to $680,000, according to his will. The New England Trust Co., as executor, posted bonds of $1,360,000.

The will of John A. Bryant, member of the produce firm of Bryant & Ordway, disposed of $170,000.

"Surplus Baggage," Says Suicide's Note

Burlington, Vt., June 18—Howard Hahn, 38, committed suicide by inhaling illuminating gas. He made a cons out of a doughnut cutter and a piece of rubber tubing, connected it to the gas stove and then inhaled the fumes. He left a note saying:

"I'm surplus baggage, will no longer put my five-cent piece in tidngs."

Volcano Threatens Japanese Villages

Tokio, June 18 (AP)—The active volcano Yakedake, in the Japanese Alps, west of Matsumoto, burst into violent eruption today and terrific rumblings were heard from the crater.

MANY SHIFTS PLANNED

The transfer of the finger print division, presided over by Roscoe Hill, from the department of correction to the department of public safety has made necessary a lot of alterations in the room space of the latter department. In the shuffle, the boiler and building inspectors are to be transferred to the moving picture building at the corner of Hancock and Cambridge sts.

GOGUEN TO TAKE COURSE

Rep. J. Henry Goguen of Leominster sails next Wednesday from New York for France. He is to take a three months' course in French civilization at the Sarbonne. The representative is a member of the faculty of Assumption College in Worcester.

MORRIS MAY RUN AGAIN

"Eddie" Morris of Quincy, Harvard football announcer, has put a lot of time in on Beacon Hill this year on legislative matters and doing favors for his neighbors. All of which means, it is said, that "Eddie" will again be a candidate for Congress in the district represented by Congressman Richard B. Wigglesworth of Milton.

NEW PRISON INDUSTRY

One of the latest prison industries is the making of rubber mats on galvanized iron frames, according to Deputy Commissioner of Correction Edward C. R. Bagley. The rubber is reclaimed from old automobile tires. The mats are being turned out at the New Bedford House of Correction, and are being used exclusively in the schools and other public buildings.

SALTONSTALL PUNISHES 35

The 35 "wilful" Republicans who played along with the Democrats during the legislative session just closed failed to get any recognition from Speaker Saltonstall in making up the presonnel of recess commissions.

BOY AVIATOR SETS RECORD

Los Angeles, June 18 (AP)—Frank Kurtz, 18-year-old Hollywood high school boy, flew 123.94 miles per hour over a three kilometer course below Long Beach yesterday.

The time will be forwarded to Washington for registration as a world's junior mark.

MOTHER-IN-LAW OF ELY DEAD

Mrs. Emily J. Dyson, mother of Mrs. Joseph B. Ely, wife of the governor, is dead from a heart attack.

The governor will not attend the commencement day exercises at Harvard, as has been the custom for Massachusetts chief executives for years, and Lieut.-Governor William S. Youngman will represent the State.

Arrangements for the funeral will be announced today.

Sixth Sense of Blind Man Wins Divorce From Hugging Wife

Memphis, Tenn., June 18 (AP)—Jurisprudence took cognizance of a sixth or "divining" sense blind persons are reputed to have and granted a divorce here yesterday to Dr. Ernest R. Cleaves, an osteopath.

Dr. Cleaves told the court he heard, sensed and "divined" that his blind wife, Mrs. Lillian Cleaves, also an osteopath, was hugging and kissing another blind man on certain occasions.

Mrs. Cleaves, now in Chicago, did not appear at the trial. The couple was married in 1928 while attending a blind school.

HUNT BEGUN OF CAPONE GANG

Chicago, June 18 (INS)—The federal government's unrelenting war on "Scarface" Al Capone and his henchmen moved today into the no man's land of gangdom in an armed drive for prisoners.

More than 50 men were sought on an indictment of conspiracy to violate the prohibition laws, one of the charges which brought their chief to the bar of reckoning.

Three details of heavily armed police squads and federal operatives went out to search for Capone's co-defendants. All haunts and hideaways of the racketeers were to be raided in a wholesale roundupof habitues.

BEACON HILL

—by—

Betty Ashton

ALL THE WORLD AND HIS WIFE WAS OUT AT The Country Club yesterday for the Eastern Horse Club races in spite of a poor weather forecast. Racing fans from New York, Chicago, Newport, North and South Shore, Providence and Worcester poured into the grandstand, stood around the paddocks or leaned against the rails to watch their favorites win or lose.

MRS. AUGUSTUS GOODWIN

* * *

At the clubhouse, where luncheon was served on the enclosed verandas overlooking the new course, friends greeted each other, horse lovers exchanged horse personalities and, of course, the dear public was outside the circle taking it all in.

* * *

In spite of a wet track and boggy greens, the crowd surged over the grounds, gayly attired and in merry spirits. It was about the smartest gathering socially we have attended this season, and all of this year's debutantes appeared with their various swains, some with their fiances.

* * *

The races were terribly exciting, and we regret to hear that at one of the jumps a horse was killed, throwing his rider, James Simpson of Chicago, who escaped unhurt. Mr. Simpson, who married Miss Ella Snelling of Boston last fall, was the owner of the horse. There were a number of spills and thrills, and after each race it was practically impossible to see the horse or rider from the mud thrown up by the horses' hoofs. What a mushy track it was!

* * *

Leaders Look Over Favorites

IN THE SADDLING ENCLOSURE BEHIND THE GRANDSTAND, the owners and trainers looked over the favorites while they were paraded before the races. Mrs. F. Ambrose Clark had an entry, Mr. James Simpson of Chicago, the Sumner Pingrees, George Lamson, John R. Macomber, William Almy, Jr., Augustus Goodwin, Miss Dorothy Neyhart and Bayard Warren were among those represented.

The ladies' jockey race in the morning came off as scheduled in spite of the rain and was won by Miss Edith Leiper riding one of John Nesbitt's horses.—Hilda Heffinger came in second and Dorothy Neyhart came in third.

* * *

Coach-and-Four

A THRILLING FEATURE was the arrival of members of Spee Club of Harvard on a coach-and-four with Jack Bird driving. To see them in the distance coming down the long avenue, horns blowing, horses prancing, boys waving was a wonderful picture. We missed the William Vanderbilt's coach which sometimes comes over from Newport for the occasion; perhaps they will arrive on Saturday.

* * *

MR. AND MRS. AUGUSTUS GOODWIN greeted many friends at the club where they were the hosts to a crowd of people. Mrs. Goodwin looked especially well notwithstanding a recent illness and her daughter, Mrs. Joe Woods, was very attractive in a green and yellow print with close turban. Also very attractive in bright-light blue was Miss Frances Goodwin, a tiny nose veil enhancing her blue eyes. They had as their guest Miss Fanny Moore of New Jersey.

* * *

MRS. GEORGE S. WEST, very youthful in velveteen raincoat and vagabond hat, entertained a large party in her box, Mr. Harold Vanderbilt, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Morgan from New York, Mr. and Mrs. William Chatfield of Cincinnati, James Appleton of Hamilton and Bayard Warren and Quincy Shaws, 2d.

* * *

Mrs. Samuel D. Warren

* * *

A FEW SUB-DEBUTANTES were present although most of them were out at the Holden McGinley tea at Milton. Mrs. John E. Thayer, Jr., was accompanied by Miss Katherine, a bud of this year, and a very attractive little maid she is, if she is as popular and gracious as her mother, she will have a great coming-out season. Another very attractive mother and daughter, Mrs. Ronald T. Lyman and Mrs. Gordon Harrower, chatted with friends on the grandstand. Mrs. Lyman very chic in blue and white knitted suit with matching turban—quite a fashion note you will notice—and Mrs. Harrower in black and white with a touch of red at the lips, quite a touch. Effective?

Future Brides Attend

CHARTREUSE GREEN WITH lavender orchids was the stunning combination worn by Mrs. Paul Rust, who was accompanied by Mr. Rust, Mr. George E. McQueston and Commander Douglas Dixon. And a touch of chartreuse on the brown suit worn by Mrs. Hamilton Osgood was most becoming. Miss Ruth Bayliss, a very beautiful debutante of a couple of years ago, wore brown and beige, which just suited her creamy skin and large brown eyes. We were interested to see Miss Harriet Morse and her fiance, Dr. George Sturgis, and please do not forget the Dr., so we are not forgetting. Sally Sprague was escorted by Ogden White, whom she will marry the first week in August, and Frankie Hamlin was found chatting with Isabella Grandin, who looked terribly smart in a green and white crocheted lace sport dress.

* * *

SATURDAY WILL BE AN even bigger day than the Seventeenth, so we'll be seeing you there.

Next Season's Debs Honored

Yesterday from "five until eight" Mrs. Holden McGinley's beautiful estate on Brush Hill rd., in Milton, was the scene of a very gay tea dance affair for a great many of next season's debutantes, given in honor of her daughter, Miss Betty McGinley, and Miss Barbara Greenough whose parents, the Henry V. Greenoughs of Brookline, shared in the receiving of their guests.

There were about 20 pourers headed by Miss Marion Dalton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Philip Dalton, also of Milton, and a debutante of last season.

JANET ROTHWELL WEDS GEORGE DUNHAM SATURDAY

At First of Country Club Race Days

Mrs. James Simpson (Ella Snelling) of Chicago strolled around the paddock looking over the mounts before the races with Mr. Frank Voss, the celebrated horse painter. Mr. Voss has just painted one of Mrs. Sumner Pingree's famous entries.

Coats of Silk for Summer

By ANN ARDEN

TO LOOK well dressed on the street in summertime is something that not every woman is able to achieve. More often than not the crowd as a whole looks a bit dragged out on warm, muggy days.

* * *

WITH A silk coat, however, a multitude of transparent sins can be covered up and not an undue portion of warmth has been added to your costuming.

* * *

A SILK coat always looks well on the street. It is always trig and neat looking and never can it be said that it is heavy or cumbersome to carry about.

* * *

MADE OF crepe de chine or flat crepe often without any lining whatsoever it makes an entirely satisfactory summer covering, and whether the dress underneath is quite perfect or not, becomes a matter of small consideration.

* * *

THIS YEAR, with all the drapey loose lines that are in fashion, silk coats become more important than ever before and many women will like them.

* * *

THE BLACK silk coat pictured is unlined, semi-fitted, has tie scarf of the material and sash belt, run through buckle. The sleeves are interesting—three circular ruffles set on between wrist and elbow.

* * *

IT IS worn with a print frock —red, black and beige on white, the skirt has box pleats center front and back, while a deep pleated ruffle outlines the sapplica neckline, edged in red and black. A narrow, similar ruffle marks the short sleeves, and the sash belt repeats the black and red.

* * *

Miss Rothwell June Bride

Miss Janet Rothwell will marry George Jay Dunham Saturday at Oliview in Marblehead, with her sister, Mrs. James Cunningham Gray, as her matron of honor, and only attendant.

Mr. Dunham is the son of Mr. and Mrs. George Jay Dunham of Glass Rocks, and will have Frankin E. Huntress as his best man. The other ushers will be Mrs. Cunningham's husband and the bride's brother, William H. Rothwell II. The ceremony will take place in the home of the bride's parents. Mr. and Mrs. James Mason Rothwell of Bay State rd. and Marblehead.

Several family parties are being given this week in honor of the bride-to-be and her fiance, but as there is such a small wedding party and the affair is to be so simple nothing very formal or elaborate will take place.

Miss Rothwell made her debut last year and has been studying at the Garland School of Home-making. Mr. Dunham is a member of the Eastern Yacht Club and the Tedesco Country Club.

Dr. Davenport, Noted Economist, Dead

Friends and Foes to Give Mayor Hot Time

Atlanta, June 18 (AP)—Friends and foes alike were striving today to give Mayor James L. Key the warmest reception in the history of the city when he returns after a tour of France with a group of mayors who were guests of the French government.

Friends were preparing a rousing tribute to the man who dared to speak the truth about prohibition's colossal failure," while foes were circulating a petition seeking his recall.

Mexicans Protest Limiting Priests

Mexico City, June 18 (AP)—President Pascual Ortiz Rubio today was receiving a stream of protests from Catholics urging him to intervene against enactment of an anti-religious measure in the state of Vera Cruz.

Dispatches from Jalapa said a bill limiting one priest to every 100,000 inhabitants had passed a second reading in the state legislature and was certain to be adopted.

SEX APPEAL IN SILENT FILMS AND TALKIES

By Gilbert Seldes

Perhaps it is because I always have been comparatively indifferent to Clara Bow on the screen that I have followed with so much curiosity Miss Parsons's biography of her and the recent new developments which have ended with Miss Bow's departure from the pictures until the return of her health. Of one so young it seems absurd to say that a picture taken long ago had extraordinary youth and beauty, but the movies exhaust their stars pretty rapidly, and it was a photograph taken at the very beginning of Miss Bow's career which for the first time made me understand why she had been particularly singled out as the "It" girl. In all the movies I saw of her Miss Bow seemed too hoydenish, too lacking in grace and languor to be the embodiment of the universal sex appeal. .

* * *

Was "It" Ever There?

I have no doubt that the sex appeal series of pictures brought money to the box office and in that sense was good business. But whether it was good business in the long run for the producers we shall never know, because the intervention of the talkies brought in so many new factors. The talkies, they told us, would kill sex appeal. But what they really meant was that they had not yet found out how to reproduce and make effective those tones in the human voice which are more potent than any beauty of face or figure in stirring the emotions.

The fact is that the silent picture was one of the worst mediums for the exploitation of any physical lure, and sex appeal was actually far less a property of the movies than they imagined. As "It" and as "S. A.," and as its later variation, "Biological Urge," it was an excellent thing to talk about, and the new names, common and jazzy and somehow unserious, allowed us to talk about things more freely than we ever had before.

The great and lasting names on the screen from Rin Tin Tin to Charlie Chaplin were totally dissociated from sexual attraction, and Miss Mary Pickford when she was America's sweetheart was after all America's sweetheart and not its mistress. The only figure of the old movies who was an exception to the rule was Rudolph Valentino, and I suspect that there were three or four other qualities as important to his success (among other things he was a good actor). The professional vamps and the heavy lovers of the screen lasted for a season or two and as simple and almost sexless lasted a generation.

Harsh Words

The publishers of America The Menace have published the book of one of its secondary points of interest by changing the title, which in the original was Scenes of Life in the Future. It is Monsieur Georges Duhamel's description of America, and the implied suggestion is that if Europe does not protect itself against America, its future will be as bad as the present is with us. How bad it is in Duhamel's opinion you may gather from the words he passes on the American talkies.

"The cinema is a pastime for slaves, an amusement for the illiterate, for miserable creatures stupefied by work and anxiety. It is the skilfully applied instrument of that multitude that the powers of Moloch have judged and condemned, and that they have succeeded in degrading. These pleasures follow one another with a feverish rapidity—so feverish indeed that the public almost never has the time to understand what it is that is slipped under its nose. Everything is arranged so that in no event shall the spectator be bored. He is given no chance to use his intelligence, to discuss, to react, to participate in any manner whatsoever. And this terrible machine, so elaborately dazzling with its luxury, its music, its human voice, this machine for stupefying and destroying the mind, is today among the most astonishing forces in the world. I assert that any people subjected through half a century to the actual influence of the American 'movie' is on the way to the worst decadence."

* * *

How Does He Know?

I should hardly venture to say that this is wrong, although I would like to have a little more proof. After he expounded his law of gravitation, Sir Isaac Newton worked for years to check it and put incredible obstacles in his own way to make sure that he was right. But people make general statements about human beings seem to think that no proof is necessary. M. Duhamel knows what effect the talkies have upon him and perhaps a few dozen other individuals; he does not know what effect they have on a hundred million Americans. He does not know, for instance, that the American audience is not overwhelmed by the speed of the talkies, precisely because they have grown used to the speed and, in fact, have complained at times that the talkies are a little slow.

* * *

Too Much for Old England

I was in England at the time D. W. Griffith's four-ply spectacle "Intolerance," was first produced there. And I heard the angry murmurs of choleric old Englishmen who left after half an hour because they could not follow the rapid switching from one episode to another, from Babylon to Paris, to America, across the centuries. It may be that Americans are brighter and it may only be that they are better trained, but this kind of shifting does not seem to us incoherent or chaotic. It is quite possible that Americans are not so stupefied by the talkies and are not as heading on the road to decadence.

In one thing Duhamel pays us an unexpected, possibly an unintentional, compliment: "Everything is arranged so that in no event shall the spectator be bored." I only wish that the arrangements were always successful.

Leading Lady—

(From the Chinese Theatre.)

She moves across the stage on silent feet—
Her hands, that flutter like white butterflies,
Are far more vivid than the weary eyes
Set in a face in which all sorrows meet.
She seems too deftly finished, too complete,
Too age-old, too immeasurably wise.
It is as though all youth, all gladness, dies
Behind her painted smile, so blandly sweet.
The words that she is speaking, sing-song fashion,
Are lost beneath the music's wailing din;
Yet sometimes one can sense a latent passion,
A fire that flames consumingly, within
The shell of loveliness that she has made
Of lacquer and embroidery and jade.

A Nice King

—By Agnes Smith—

Of royal visitors this country has welcomed, one of the most gracious and best mannered has been King Prajadhipok of Siam. When he returns to Bangkok next month he will leave behind him the conviction that Oriental courtesy is not just a myth.

The king and his queen entered this country modestly. Their visit was in itself not a show tour, but a tribute to American medical skill. They came to avail themselves of the service of Dr. John M. Wheeler, who has conducted himself with the greatest discretion and taste.

Prajadhipok has had nothing to sell; no cause to push; no ax to grind; no money to borrow. His own government is so well managed that taxes are almost non-existent, and the much-advertised depression is scarcely felt as far away as Siam. The king, of "divine" descent, mingles freely with his subjects because his celestial origin makes him immune from curiosity and malice alike.

* * *

I wish that other foreign visitors—royal or literary—would take a few lessons in manners from Prajadhipok. For instance, in the delicate art of achieving and avoiding publicity the king managed the situation very cleverly. After the operation on his eye, the bulletins were brief, informative and to the point. No reporters were insulted; no cameramen were assaulted. No journalistic skulls were fractured. The villainous, lying, money press returned courtesy for courtesy. Politeness is the most infectious of all qualities.

When Prajadhipok took possession of Ophir Hall, photographs of the most interesting rooms of the house were released to the press. A simple gesture and a natural one. There was no aura of snobbery about the king; no false pretense of exclusiveness.

The king and queen maintained friendly relations with their Westchester neighbors. They even attended, unostentatiously, a local performance of the Metropolitan Opera Company in White Plains. With great good sense they were photographed with the singers.

Many a local celebrity are wary about posing with stage folks—they are fearful of potential scandal. This is foolish in face of the fact that stage people often have their reputations smirched by wealthy non-professionals. However, all this is aside from the point.

The fact remains that the Queen of Siam had her picture taken with Mlle. Lily Pons. And, in the photograph, it was the queen who was gazing with awe at the artist. Obviously she is a wise and good and appreciative lady.

* * *

Before their accession to the throne, the King and Queen of Siam were frequent visitors to Hollywood, where they were always received with unaffected warmth and delight. Movie stars will tell you that the King has a sly sense of humor, a marvelous sense of fun and an easy, democratic disposition. He likes such simple amusements as the radio, the movies and parlor games.

As heir apparent, he enjoyed the regal magnificence of his brother, then the king. He liked to entertain his movie friends with news reel views of his brother taking part in all sorts of impressive ceremonies.

A movie star of my acquaintance tells me that he gleefully called the attention of his audiences to the fact that his brother was invariably shielded by a large and ornate umbrella.

"Whenever you see that umbrella, you will know that that is my brother," he used to say.

Then Prince Prajadhipok became king. He returned to this country with his usual collection of beloved films. Proudly he exhibited the news reels to his motion picture hosts.

"But now," he explained, "when you see the umbrella, that is I."

Memoirs

—By Charles Hanson Towne—

MY FRIEND, the Young-Old Philosopher, stepped into my office the other morning. He caught me reading Prince von Bulow's Memoirs, which have just been issued by Little, Brown.

"Do you think," he said, "that it is a propitious sign when so many journals of this kind, and biographies and autobiographies are pouring from our presses?"

I told him that I did; that it spoke well for the intelligence of the people that such volumes met with the response they deserved.

"Not," I added, "that it is wise for readers to give up fiction. But they will never do that. Some of our greatest men find delight, and will always find delight, in reading detective and mystery stories. Woodrow Wilson, amid all the clamor of the war, pored over the stories of J. S. Fletcher. They proved as good a tonic as golf, or any setting-up exercises.

"But history and biography will always allure us. The lives of men in high places, if they are told directly and sincerely, will forever interest those of us who have never found what we think should have been our chance."

* * *

Tells the Truth

My friend agreed with me. He had merely dipped into this initial volume of von Bulow's the first of four colossal parts, none of which was to be published until after the death of the Secretary of State to the Imperial Chancellor from 1897 to 1903. Here was a man who had been privileged to watch the whole pageant of the official life of the German Empire through a period that was fraught with interest and drama, and of course he had a story to tell.

"And what a story it is, to be sure," I said. "Wasn't it Bernard Shaw who cynically said that no autobiography was worth reading, because he maintained that no writer of his own life ever told quite the truth?"

"The very fact," I answered, "that he did not permit this amazing record to be put before the public until he had gone to his grave, speaks volumes for its authenticity. It is a sort of 'now it can be told' autobiography. The manuscript was locked away in a vault, and sealed. The editing and translation of it took years of hard work; and the publishers were in duty bound not to print it until a certain time had elapsed. All of which is dramatic; and the stipulations surrounding this publication only serve to whet the appetite of the reader."

* * *

New Light on Kaiser

"Does it throw any new light on the Kaiser before the war?" inquired my friend.

"It certainly does. It makes him out a neurasthenic of the first order; a man mad for power, who believed in the high destiny of the Fatherland. Listen to this." And I read him this brief paragraph:

On June 16, 1898, during the celebration of the 10th anniversary of his accession, the Kaiser made a speech to the officers of his regiment of guards at Potsdam. Rightly and in agreement with his great forefather, Frederick II, he declared that the army was the main support of the country and the central pillar of the throne, but added, not entirely in consonance with realities, that 10 years previously, when he ascended the throne, the army alone had confidence in him; it had believed in him, and it would continue to follow him with 'unconditional, iron, blind obedience.' It is painful to recall that such words should, 20 years later, have been followed by the flight into Holland."

And great light is thrown on Bismarck before his fall," I said. "And there is much that has never before been published about the attitude of Germany toward England during the Boer War.

"The deeper you get into this thrilling book the more it will become evident to you that it could never have been published under any other circumstances. For the Kaiser is still alive, though in exile; and he will not be pleased, if he ever reads this volume, at the expose of his treatment of Bismarck, his change of front toward this mighty man, for the childish reason that he wished to humiliate his own mother! I can't tell you how the volume—and this is only the first of four, mind you—reeks with big and little scandals. Here is a voice from Beyond, like a trumpet."

"I must read it," said my friend.

"Everyone must read it," I told him. "It is the best autobiography we have had for many years."

Black Walnut

Bleat he whom Fate has ne'er compelled to share
Inherited from great-great-Uncle Tim,
And warranted relentless to outwear
A host of lesser things, beloved and fair,
And heavily inflict its dreary gloom
On some unfortunate and helpless room
Symbol of all the objects of one's hate—
Mawkish engravings of "At Last Alone."
Plaques of some long-tailed pheasant and its mate,
Carpets with crops of dingy horrors sown:
Surely, forced living with these bugbears' grime
Has driven many gentle souls to crime!

MRS. HARDING LAUDED FALL AS 'FRIEND'

El Paso, Tex., June 18 (AP)—After reading President Hoover's address at Marion, O., and comments on it, Mrs. A. S. Fall today made public correspondence between her and Mrs. Warren G. Harding.

In his address Mr. Hoover said President Harding "had a dim realization that he had been betrayed by a few of the men whom he trusted . . ."

In a letter written to Mrs. Fall by Mrs. Harding on Feb. 15, 1924, the Harding's death in the late summer of 1923, Mrs. Harding said:

"I am greatly pleased to have your telegram, and it meant a great deal to me to know that my friends were thinking of me at that time.

"I am now in Washington for a time at least, and called up the Wardman Park to see if you were there, and I was disappointed to hear that you did not come with Senator Fall. I hope you will be coming on while I am yet here."

The letter was signed, "Your friend, Florence Kling Harding."

Mrs. Fall recalled that, after President Harding's death in San Francisco and burial in Marion, Mrs. Harding returned to Washington and through a friend invited Mrs. Fall and Mr. Fall to lunch and to spend that afternoon with her.

COURT WARNS LOWELL MAN

Lowell, June 18—Ray F. Webster, chain drugstore proprietor whose wife petitioned for the appointment of a conservator for his business, was advised by Judge Harris in Middlesex Probate Court here today to refrain from showing his feelings.

This came when Atty. Max Cohen, counsel for Mrs. Webster, claimed Webster was nodding his head at Miss Bessie Rogers, a witness testifying to the book keeping account of Webster's business.

Dr. Herbert M. Larrabee, Lowell psychiatrist, a witness called by Cohen, testified he had made no physical examination of Webster, but from his appearance in court he would not say he was a dipsomaniac. Also, in answer to a hypothetical question by Cohen, that Webster's alleged actions were similar to cases of dipsomania.

Mrs. Webster's petition is based on her complaint that her husband is incompetent and a spendthrift.

Women to Tour U. S. for Disarmament

Los Angeles, June 18 (AP)—Plans for a "disarmament caravan" to start from Los Angeles June 21, bearing petitions to President Hoover urging disarmamant, were revealed today at the 10th annual convention of the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom.

The motor cavalcade will pass through 25 states.

Ends His Life as Shots Sound on Film

Chicago, June 18 (AP)—Several thousand persons watched a movie here, ignorant that the body of a suicide lay in a rear seat. Just as pistol shots came from the screen, Christopher Kelley, 60, shot himself. Only those in nearby seats knew of the shooting.

Man About Town

By AL DUFFY

SONG

Today is ours! O, touch my hand and brow,
Bewilder me with kisses; let no mar
Of time, or sudden change drift in to chill
The sunshine where we are!
Bewilder me with kisses . . . close my lids
With little songs . . . with some sweet, mournful tune.
Place petals on them that I may not see Tomorrow come too soon.

"DUFFY FOR MAYOR"

These are boom days. Everybody is stepping on everybody else's toes trying to launch a boom for someone for a political office. Within the week we have seen booms for Roosevelt-for-President, Curley-for-Vice-President, Curley-for-Governor (I wish he'd make up his mind!) David I. Walsh-for-President. Even Governor Ely has been mentioned as a possible "dark horse" in the event that Roosevelt steps out of the picture. Then, there is that omni-present boom for the return of Coolidge to the White House and the boom for Al Smith-for-President. That will just give you a rough idea.

So, sez we, why not start a boom? And, come to think of it, we asked ourselves, who would you rather boom than Duffy for Mayor? So there you are, take it or leave it. Our hat is in the ring.

"DUFFY FOR MAYOR!"

Hurrah! Hurrah!

DICTATOR EIGHT
The Eight that gives you amazing smoothness proved by Torsiographic tests

THE thrill, delight, and welcome thrift of Free Wheeling are yours in all their meaning in Studebaker's famous Dictator.

The Dictator Eight gives you such fine car refinements as dual carburetion and manifolding, full-power exhaust muffling and carburetor silencing.

What a background for the latest and greatest Studebaker contribution to motoring—Free Wheeling with positive gear control!

The Dictator gives you thrilling speed, with the quiet, unhampered flight which Free Wheeling brings. You shift noiselessly at any pace, ignoring the clutch entirely between second and high. Traffic officials have hailed Free Wheeling as a distinct contribution to public safety.

"Rounded" Performance

The Torsiograph, one of the most nearly infallible of automotive laboratory instruments, records accurately the vibration of any rotating shaft. The closer the record chart approaches a true circle, the more nearly perfect the balance of the crankshaft. At the left are shown the Torsiographic records of The Dictator Eight nine (9) bearing crankshaft and those of two other eights of double The Dictator's price. Notice the smooth roundness of The Dictator graph contrasted with the irregularity, or "bumpiness" of the other two.

You save money when you buy The Dictator and every mile you drive it. Free Wheeling gives you 10,000 miles of travel for 8,000 miles of engine work—15% to 20% economy in gasoline and oil.

Go Free Wheeling in this smoothest Eight of its price class. You will be convinced that The Dictator is the Eight for you.

CRASH INJURES 5 IN WALTHAM

Two women and three men were slightly injured early today when automobiles operated by Joseph Curran, of Freeman st, Auburndale, and Lawrence Hickey, of Dunton st., Brighton, were in head-on collision in Appleton st., Waltham.

All were taken to Waltham Hospital and treated for bruises and lacerations. The injured, in addition to the drivers, are Helen Gearin, of 73 Fernwood rd., Roxbury; Mildred Welbrauch, of Beacon st., Brookline, and John O Sullivan, of 83 Etna st., Brighton.

New Trawl Net Lets Little Fish Slip Away and Live

Washington, July 18 (AP)—The Bureau of Fisheries believes it has developed a trawl net which will keep the gib fish in and let the little ones out for propagation purposes.

The dwindling haddock supply started the inquiry. In 1930 fishermen complained the fish were becoming alarmingly smaller.

W. C. Harrington, aquatic biologist, found hundreds of thousands of pounds of undersized haddock were caught each year and shoveled back into the ocean, dead.

MELLON TALKS WITH NORMAN

London, June 18 (AP)—Andrew W. Mellon, secretary of the United states Treasury, today had a long talk and luncheon with Montagu Norman, governor of the Bank of England.

There is a feeling here that the secretary is gathering first hand knowledge of European financial affairs and probably a going into the issue of reparations and war debts.

He has consistently declined, however, to discuss his meetings with important men of England

121 Clamor for Leap in Parachute at $3 a Minute

New Orleans, June 18 (AP)—It may be the unemployment situation, or maybe people are growing more air-minded, but there's no dearth of applicants for parachute jumping.

Fearing that no one might be on hand to leap from a balloon at the height of 1500 feet Saturday, the Audubon Park Commission advertised the job to pay $3 a minute while in the air. The ad was answered by 121 men.

The commission will now make its selection by drawing one of the names out of a hat.

HARVARD AWARDS TOTAL OF 2076 DEGREES

THIS IS LIFE

BUSINESS AND CULTURE; A SELECTED GUIDE TO READING

By ROBERT E. ROGERS

ONE OF THE MOST INTERESTING FACTS about modern business is that the great industrial organizations have found necessary to supplement the work of our public school and college systems. Many of them, as a matter of fact, run elaborate educational systems of their own.

ROBERT E. ROGERS

I do not mean merely the apprenticeship courses in which prospective employees are prepared for their jobs. Even our college graduates, and technical school graduates seeking employment in some of the great industrial plants find that they have to begin all over again to go to school. This can easily be understood, since our schools and colleges do not—and should not—prepare their pupils for specific and highly technical jobs. Even in our engineering schools there is increasing criticism of the detailed, technical upper-class courses. More and more the demand is being made for emphasis on a basic scientific and engineering education, with less of vocational training.

But our large business organizations do more than that. They have apparently found it necessary to run their own schools for instruction in the fundamentals, such as mathematics, writing, English composition and the like. This does not reflect any too favorably on the schools, but it does show an increasing sense of responsibility on the part of the employer toward the employe, which is admirable. In some organizations they are doing their best, by means of proper intelligence tests, to place their workers where they can be happiest and most efficient.

* * *

Business and Culture

There is even, apparently, a tendency to do something for the general culture of the employe. The reading tastes of the partly educated individual are often deplorable, and if Business can help to make good reading easily accessible and attractive and to guide the individual toward better reading, Business can do a great deal to raise the level of our popular American culture.

All this occurs to me as a result of a letter which I received recently from the librarian of the educational library of the Bell Telephone Company of Toronto, Canada. This particular example may be Canadian, but I take it for granted that its counterpart may be found in our own country.

The company has taken cognizance of the fact that the demand for "book lists" is constant on the part of people who would like to read good literature, but do not know exactly where to turn.

But there is nothing harder to make up than a book list, unless you know the tastes and capabilities of an individual. I am asked all the time for them, and the demand usually finds me stumped. But Miss McPhail, the librarian in Toronto, has had an interesting and suggestive idea. Instead of taking any library lists ready-made, she has consulted some 20 books on reading and made a list only of the books mentioned by all of them!

I do not know whether this has been done before, but it strikes me as an excellent idea, particularly as my own book, "The Fine Art of Reading," was one of the books consulted. Miss McPhail tells me that the process was a highly selective one, since only 27 titles survived; that is, only 27 titles were mentioned in all 20 of the guides consulted.

Some 300 were discarded as not quite making the grade, including such classics or near-classics as "The Forsyte Saga," by Galsworthy, one of the great books of our generation; Somerset Maugham's "Of Human Bondage," a recognized minor classic among our modern novels; Kipling's "Jungle Book," Plato's "Dialogues" and dozens of others.

* * *

Here Is the List

For what the list is worth, then, I am reprinting it in the hope that it may give some of our eager readers a little guidance.

DRAMA—Aeschylus; Shakespeare; Goethe's Faust.
POETRY—The Rubaiyat of Omar Khayyam; the Poems of Horace; Chaucer's Canterbury Tales; Whitman's Leaves of Grass.
HISTORY—Gibbon's Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire, Macaulay's History of England.
FICTION—Cervantes' Don Quixote; Defoe's Robinson Crusoe; Fielding's Tom Jones; Austen's Pride and Prejudice; Goldsmith's The Vicar of Wakefield; Hawthorne's The Scarlet Letter; Hugo's Les Miserables; Mark Twain's Adventures of Huckleberry Finn.

That these are all first rate of their kind can not be denied. The fact that these titles appear in each of 20 books that serve as a guide to good reading is very significant. Whether they will meet the tastes and needs of any one individual is beside the point. They will serve as a starter, like a stone thrown in a pond, from which the ripples will go widening out indefinitely.

Such a list made up by any one person is always suspect. We are beginning to know something of the difficulties of temperament, or heredity, of herd instinct, of tradition and authority, of physical make-up and the like, which affect the thinking and the judgment of the wisest of us. Recently Will Durant, author of "The Story of Philosophy," published a book entitled "Adventures of Genius." In it he lists the "Ten Greatest Thinkers," the "Ten Greatest Poets," the "Twelve Most Important Dates in World History" and "One Hundred Best Books for an Education."

There are probably few Americans better fitted for such a task, as Durant's learning is encyclopedic, humane and judgmatic. But every one of these lists has been seriously criticized, as much for its omissions as for its commissions. Nevertheless, such guides are always useful for those whose formal education has been sketchy or interrupted. And Miss McPhail's list, derived with great selectivity and exhibiting an extraordinary unanimity of authorities, ought to be still more useful. Educational libraries may come to be essential departments of every great American business organization.

J. P. MORGAN IN HARVARD PROCESSION

J. P. Morgan international banker, member of the class of 1889 at Harvard, indicated by the arrow, in the procession of dignitaries and notables marching in the Harvard yard today to the exercises that culminated in the awarding of 2076 degrees. The banker had an added reason for being present at the ceremony this year, because his partner, Thomas W. Lamont, was one of those honored by the university. The number of degrees awarded this year exceeds all other graduations. Included in the honorary list were Justice Harlan F. Stone of the United States Supreme Court, Bishop William Lawrence, Newton D. Baker.

Five and Ten

By FANNIE HURST

(Copyright, 1929, by Fannie Hurst)

(This famous story has been made into a talking picture by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, with Marion Davies in the leading role.)

When Gratton was moved by a scene he was writing, especially in those earlier years before his "Tragedy of Laughter" had been written, he always complained of the physical discomforts he experienced while at work. His ears rang. A curious little elevator of hunger seemed to ride up and down the pit of his stomach.

His tonsils wanted to burst and his ears became bright, polished pink. Jennifer once wrote of him in a monograph:

"I could tell how the work on 'Tragedy of Laughter' was coming by the color of his ears."

In addition now to those roaring symptoms, Gratton, after Rarick had completed his reading, had a horrible fear he was going to cry.

"There in a nutshell, is some of the wisdom I have tried to squeeze out of my defeat, Gratton. Not much of a job to a literary man like you—but it's my legacy. . . ."

"Well—guess I'll be getting along now. Don't suppose you know it. I may be wrong. But seems to me that's the stuff immortal literature is made of—that page you just read me. It's the thing Lincoln poured into his address at Gettysburg. It's as close to God as Senator Vest's plea for a dog. It's Shelley and Goethe crying for justice in prose.

Knew Her Step

"I may be crazy, but that is the kind of stuff that achieves immortality. That last will and testament of yours is literature. . . ."

"I don't want immortality. At the moment I want milk and graham crackers. Have them with me."

"There's Jennifer!"

"Where?"

"I heard her step."

"No."

"Yes."

"Ah, yes, I do hear now. Strange that you should have known her step at the great distance of the inner hall. How? I call her?"

"No -no. I must be going."

"Strange that you should have heard her."

"I've a glove of hers. She dropped it one day. I'll ask to see her and by way out—to give it back."

Seated, small, the look of hunchback in his face, the tall, Gothic twilight climbing into vaulted shadows, the yarn of Pagliacci began to stalk across stained glass, the organ ballooning into the dusk.

'OLD IRONSIDES' TO SAIL JULY 3

By Associated Press

Plans are afoot in Washington to have the restored frigate Constitution sail on her "patriotic cruise" from the Navy Yard here July 3 under her own power and manned by a crew of 75 dressed in naval uniforms of 1812.

Rep. Bloom of New York, associate director of the George Washington Bicentennial Commission, said today he agreed with advocates of the proposal that Old Ironsides should be put into commission exactly as she was old oak—to the last detail."

"It seems to me a mistake to violate the historic atmosphere of the famous old ship by having her manned by a crew in the uniforms of today," he said. "Moreover, I think it would be an inspiration to everyone to see the Constitution under full sail instead of in tow of a tug."

Bloom said he would guarantee to provide the uniforms if the Navy had no funds for the purpose.

W. B. Greene to Be Buried Tomorrow

Funeral services will be held tomorrow for William B. Greene, former station agent at Waltham and an employe of the Boston & Maine railroad for about 50 years, who died at his home, 37 Gorham st., Waltham, on Tuesday. He is survived by two daughters, Mrs. A. Greene, of Waltham, and Mrs. Otto J. Neilson, of West Medford. The service will be held from his home and interment will be in Calvary Cemetery, Waltham.

MOVE TO CLOSE GENOA CAFE

The Genoa Cafe in Province st., of which Alexander Whiteside and George R. Grantham are trustees of the estate, was the target for injunction proceedings by Leo Schwartz, legal adviser to Police Commissioner Hultman today.

In one of three bills in equity filed in Superior Court Schwartz said the Genoa premises are resorted to for improper purposes, for keeping and exposing liquor for sale and for gambling.

The bill stated Whiteside and Grantham are trustees under the will of Patrick McAleer, and that the place is operated by Addie M. Blood and Robert Ronnisin.

Similar injunctions were sought against the Huntington Drug Co., Inc., on Huntington ave., owned by M. R. Connelly, and a lodging house in Waltham st., South End, of which the owner was given as Charles Assad.

NOTABLES ARE HONORED BY UNIVERSITY

Bishop Lawrence, Newton D. Baker, Thomas W. Lamont Included in the Long List

Harvard ended its 295th year today in a pompous and colorful graduation that brought a record award of 2076 degrees.

British and American leaders were recognized in the award of honorary degrees

The two British recipients were Sir Robert Alexander Falconer, president of the University of Toronto and last year the Ingersoll lecturer at Harvard, and Sir James Arthur Salter of London, secretary of the reparations committee and financial adviser to the League of Nations

Harlan Fiske Stone, justice of the United States Supreme Court, was honored with a doctor of laws de-

Dr. Harvey Cushing, head of Peter Bent Brigham Hospital and described in the award as "adroit with the scalpel and pen" was given a doctor of science degree.

Thomas W. Lamont, New York financier and partner of J. P. Morgan, was given a doctor of laws degree for "boundless service to his university."

Bishop William Lawrence, former head of the Episcopal diocese in Massachusetts, was given a similar degree as "wise, large and tolerant in the many duties that have come in a singularly useful and happy life."

Newton D. Baker, wartime secretary of war under President Wilson, was awarded the same for his organization of "gigantic armies, efficient and without reproach."

DEGREE FOR PARSONS

Herbert C. Parsons, Massachusetts probation officer, was cited for his work among young delinquents in the award of a master of arts degree

Allston Burr, president of the alumni three years ago, was honored with the same as "a benefactor, generous and retiring."

J. P. Morgan, class of '89, was present to see his partner honored

RICHARDSON IS ACQUITTED

John B. Richardson, wealthy Arlington realtor, was cleared of all blame in connection with the burning of the old DeWitt Clinton school in Newton last winter, in a sealed jury verdict returned in Middlesex court today.

Richardson was tried as accessory before the fact after Judge John M. Gibbs had directed a verdict of not guilty on an arson charge.

Today's verdict freed him also of the accessory charge

Richardson was listed as owner of the school that investigators decided had been set afire on the night of January 18.

The information was contained in the report filed by the New York State Transfer Tax Department in New York city today Mrs. Ewing is given a legacy of $9000 and a life estate in residue of $312,618. ARRIVALS FROM LONDON

MRS. CARTER AND JAMES MRS. ALMOND AND DOREEN

Mrs. Ernest Carter, wife of one of the officers of the liner Bermuda, burned at Hamilton, Bermuda, and her son, James, were among the passengers arriving from Liverpool on the S. S. Newfoundland today. She has been visiting Mr. Carter's folks in London and was upset by the disaster to his ship. Mrs. Doris Almond and Doreen returned from a visit with London relatives. They were met at the pier by Mrs. Almond and after a visit with relatives here will return to their home in Brooklyn. (Staff photos.)

BOY SAVES SELF AND BROTHER

Forbes Kelley 12 today saved himself and his brother, Frank, 9, from asphyxiation when fireworks started a blaze in the basement of their home at 31 Dix st., Winchester.

Forbes forced his way through the smoke, obtained a bucket and threw quantities of water on a pile of burning rubbish, extinguishing it, singled handed.

The brothers are the sons of Mr. and Mrs. Frank B Kelley. They were playing in the basement when Frank, Jr., discharged fireworks which set fire to the pile of rubbish.

Forbes, on the other side of the cellar, was forced to fight his way through smoke to safety, and then set about the task of extinguishing the blaze.

In the meantime neighbors had notified the fire department, but when the apparatus arrived the blaze was all out. The damage was estimated at $500.

DAILY TRUE STORY

LETTER PERFECT

SHE READ THE THREE LINES AGAIN

THE ENVELOPE was of cheap quality paper. It had been mailed locally and the address was typewritten. There was no return address on it.

"Probably some sort of an advertisement," thought Charlotte as she idly turned it in her hand. Like most women she speculated as to what was in the envelope instead of immediately opening it to find out. When she did open it she drew out a single sheet of yellow paper such as might have been torn from a pad. She read the few words on it and for a moment they didn't seem to make any sense. Then she read them again. Just three lines:

"Dear Mrs. Moore:

"You'd better watch your husband. He's been staying out a lot at night. A word to the wise."

There was no signature.

Charlotte's first inclination was to laugh. That was succeeded by anger—anger that anyone should dare to send such an anonymous letter to her. Then came speculation. After all, Allen had been spending a lot of time away from home at night.

She didn't want to think about that side of it but she forced herself to do it. What, she thought, would Allen think if he had received such a letter warning him about her. He wouldn't believe it. And yet it would be true. Not quite true, but almost true. Because there was Tony Sartwell.

Call in Secret
Without Allen the Wiser

In an hour, now, he would be calling on her, without Allen knowing a thing about it. And it wouldn't be his first call, the little visits which were steadily growing more intimate. There had been nothing wrong but Charlotte knew she was playing with fire.

If it were true of her why couldn't it be true of Allen, she thought. Why couldn't he stray ever so slightly, just as she had done.

It must be true, she decided; there must be something to it. And, despite the ache in her heart, she couldn't blame Allen. Somehow it seemed like retribution, a just punishment. Allen must have learned about her and Tony or he must have suspected something. And, wounded in his love and pride, he must have turned to this other woman, whoever she was.

Slowly Charlotte shredded the letter into thin strips and then tore them even finer. She threw the scraps into a wastebasket. Maybe she had lost Allen's love, but there was at least one thing she could do. She went to the telephone and called Tony.

She Called Tony
And Bade Him Stay Away

"No," she said after a few minutes, "neither today nor any other day. It was foolish to let you come the first time."

She hung up the receiver.

She felt better then, her mind was easier. She had done what she could to clean her own hands. But what about Allen—and the other woman? She couldn't ask him, her pride wouldn't let her do that. But she had to know. Again she lifted the receiver and called her husband's office.

Allen's voice came over the wire. "Yes?" he asked

"Oh, I'm all right," answered Allen.

"Will you—will you have to work tonight?" she finally said. "You know, I get lonely here by myself, even though I haven't said anything."

For a moment he didn't answer. Then he said:

"No, there won't be any more work. That's all over now. Are you glad?"

Charlotte almost whispered her answer.

"I am. And hurry home, dear," she said.

She could forget it now—the anonymous letter. It had been a vicious lie. She would never tell Allen—there was no reason for telling him. It was all a bad dream and she would forget it, Tony and all.

In his office Allen was also thinking as he hung up the receiver.

"It looks like it turned the trick," he said to himself. "I never heard of a man sending an anonymous letter to his own wife, but that was the only way to make Charlotte snap out of that foolishness with Sartwell. It gave her something else to think about."

TAKES ALIMONY TO WIN DIVORCE

A woman's reluctance to take alimony from her husband was overcome in Middlesex Probate court today when Judge Colin C. Campbell agreed to grant her a divorce if she accepted the money.

She was Mrs. Esther Louis Willey of Sherborn who sued John H. Willey on grounds of cruel and abusive treatment.

After testifying that her husband, who failed to contest the case had broken one of her front teeth with a blow of his fist, and had thrown things at her, Mrs. Willey said:

"I don't want anything more to do with him. I don't even want alimony."

"Whether you like it or not," Judge Campbell stated, "I am going to order your husband to pay something towards the support of your three children."

Mrs. Willey, still appearing reluctant, Judge Campbell announced he would grant her the divorce if she took the money, and she agreed. The amount to be paid was not determined.

2076 CONFERRED DEGREES AT HARVARD and many other graduates who since have made a place in the world watched the exercises.

Undergraduates numbered 666, one-third of whom were graduated with honors. The others were conferred on leaders in the life of America and to those successful in the graduate and special schools.

With President A. Lawrence Lowell in the lead and the recipients of honors next in line, the academic procession formed under sunny skies in the north section of the yard.

Past University Hall, while more than 5000 former graduates looked on, the winding procession led past the Widener Library and Sever and Emerson halls to the Sever quadrangle.

ELY UNABLE TO ATTEND.

One sad note was attendant at the exercises in the absence of Gov Joseph B. Ely, unable to attend on account of the death of Mrs. Ely's mother

Lieut.-Gov. William S. Youngman represented the Commonwealth, the brilliantly garbed cortege of lancers lending color to a scene already overwhelming black in the caps and gowns

At the quadrangle, the speeches of President Lowell and the undergraduate commencement speakers were delivered.

The latter included that of Horace C. Rose of Columbus, recently chosen secretary to Chief Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes in accordance with the custom of the Supreme Court's head appointment of a Harvard law student every year.

SEVEN WIN AWARDS

Robert Gilchrist Luckey of Vinton, Ia., and Milton V. Anastos of Woodcliff, N. J., were others.

Victor M. Harding, Jr., of Chicago, outstanding member of the football team for three years, won the highest undergraduate award given by the university, the Lionel de Jersey Harvard scholarship at Emmanuel College, Cambridge, Eng. He is second marshal of the class.

The Henry Russell Shaw traveling award open to a senior, went to Zehman I. Mosesson of Uniontown, Pa.

Vernon Munroe, Jr., of New York city won the Fiske scholarship at Trinity College, Eng. He was captain of the track team, president of the student council, and third marshal of the senior class.

Four others who received the Frederick Sheldon Prize Fellowships for travel abroad in recognition of summa cum laude degrees in special studies were Conrad M. Arensberg of Pittsburgh, Pa., anthropology; Albert Roust Hellweg of Wollaston, romance languages; Arnold Louis Kowarsky of Brooklyn, N. Y., government, and Robert G. S. Maier of Long Island, N. Y., romance languages.

Of the other graduates, 543 won bachelor of arts degrees and 123 bachelor of science degrees from the college itself.

In the graduate school of arts and sciences 283 won degrees of Master of Arts and 96 those of Doctor of Philosophy.

The Engineering School graduated 29 bachelors of science, 8 master of science, 33 master of science in engineering and one doctor of science.

Twenty doctors of the science of jurisprudence, 18 masters of law and 395 bachelors of law were graduated from the law school.

The business school graduated 381, 62 with distinction, and awarded one degree of doctor of commercial science and the medical school graduated 128 doctors, 2 with honors.

Dr. Bigelow and Commissioner Bazeley Call for Meeting of Town, City Officials

Dr. George H. Bigelow, commissioner of public health, and William A. L. Bazeley, commissioner of conservation, who controls the bureau of animal industry, issued a call for all officials in the state responsible for control of stray dogs to meet with them to plan the drive. The public is invited.

Four deaths, all attributed to lack of immediate treatment, were those of a Millbury woman early in the year, a Watertown man and a Westboro man on June 5 and a Waltham youth on June 6.

'PAL' REED WEDS GIRL PREACHER

Percival Lloyd "Pal" Reed, a contender for the world's middleweight boxing crown several years ago, today married Miss Mabel K. Eldridge, assistant pastor of Trinity and St. James' Methodist Episcopal churches of Manchester.

They will spend their honeymoon in the Epworth League Institute in Tilton and then tour the West.

Reed lived in Natick, Mass., during his fighting days and then became boxing coach at New Hampshire University, from which he was graduated in January. Mrs. Reed was graduated from Keene Normal School and Boston University Religious School.

ELY WILL OPEN RUTLAND UNIT

The new medical and surgical building at Rutland sanatorium will be dedicated by Governor Ely Friday, June 26 at 11 a. m.

Dr. Joseph H. Pratt, physician-in-chief of Boston dispensary, will discuss "The Sanatorium and the Home in the Treatment of Tuberculosis."

Dr. Frank H. Washburn of Holden District Hospital will speak on the development of treatment at Rutland.

"Surgery in Pulmonary Tuberculosis" will be the topic of Dr. Edward D. Churchill of Massachusetts General Hospital. The final address will be delivered by Ernest B. Emerson, superintendent of the Rutland State Sanatorium.

Approximately 3000 invitations have been sent out. The entire institution will be open for inspection.

BREEN HELD IN ATTACK CASE

David J. "Beano" Breen, center of recent court battles with police over liquor raids, was held in $1500 today for the federal grand jury charged with interference with a federal officer.

John Sullivan of Dwight st., South End, was held in a like amount with an additional charge of sale of liquor against him and John Runson of Chelsea, charged with interference, was discharged.

Through counsel, Breen admitted attack on Prohibition Agent Walter Sullivan 10 days ago, but said he did not know who he was and later apologized. U. S. Commissioner Edwin C. Jenney found probable cause.

Sullivan said he was examining liquor permits in a South End drug store when he witnessed an illegal sale. The attack followed, he said.

FIRE SWEEPS 2 NO. END STORES

Fire which swept through a three-story building in Salem st., North End, early today destroyed the interior of an apartment on the third floor and damaged the stocks of two stores on the ground floor.

The blaze, believed to have started from a cigarette, caused damage estimated at $2500 in the apartment of Louis Lanci, the jewelry store of Israel Taubers and the dry goods store of M. Rosenthal.

Jamaica Plain Woman Overcome

Found on the floor of her bathroom by her sister last night, Mrs. Mary Sullivan of 40 Weld st, Jamaica Plain, was rushed to City Hospital after a fireman with an inhalator had failed to revive her. She was held for treatment and is expected to recover.

According to police of West Roxbury station, an open jet was pouring gas into the bathroom when Mrs. Ellen Doyle entered her.

Melrose Man Badly Hurt as Car Hits Tree

HATHAWAY COUNSEL FAIL TO SHAKE DEATH STORY

The tense drama that began then continued today as Galvin, once the playboy's closest friend, flung denial after denial to the shouted questions of George Hurley, chief counsel for the defense.

These questions sought to gain from Galvin the admission that Pinky Hathaway—"you called him Pinky for 12 years, didn't you"—had told him he didn't know what really happened to Varna, that he couldn't understand why she was dead.

"No" and "I don't remember that he said anything like that" were Galvin's sharp-bitten answers, colored at times with flip retorts.

Again these questions, spoken in a tone that was close to accusation, sought from him the admission that he sent Hathaway on his flight, that Hathaway reluctant to go, wanted to stay.

FALS NO LONGER

Cool nearly all the time, but occasionally with his ire aroused, the thin-faced Galvin, wearing a blue suit and red tie, faced his one-time pal, the defendant—the cool Hathaway arrayed in his blue suit and his blue tie. They are buddies no longer.

Galvin's cross-examination ended midway through the morning. Counting his testimony of yesterday he had been on the witness stand only three and one-half hours.

Seven government witnesses followed him in quick succession before the noon recess, attempting to trace Hathaway's movements following the murder, after he had parted with Galvin at Galvin's Fall River home at about 1 20 a. m. on March 24.

SOUGHT DRINK

Two witnesses were called to prove that Hathaway signed the register at the Hotel Dixie in New York with the name and address of John Sullivan of Moore st., Boston.

This point, in the midst of testimony by one witness, the playboy's counsel surprisingly conceded as fact.

William Mallan, a bellboy at the Dixie, who identified Hathaway in court as the Mr. Sullivan who had "roomed" at the hotel at 7 45 p. m. on March 24, testified to Hathaway's request for a drink and for directions to Greenwich Village.

George L. Drown, jr., tollkeeper on the Mount Hope bridge connecting Portsmouth and Bristol, R. I. the shortest route between Newport and Providence, testified that at 2 a. m. on March 24 a man resembling Hathaway drove over the bridge—but he could not be sure the defendant was that man

TELLS OF FINDING CAR

Two Boston police officers, Patrolmen William F. Healey and Elmer J. Cuddy of the Joy st. station, told of the finding of Hathaway's car parked in Cambridge st., West End, 22 minutes after midnight on March 25. Cuddy, who found it, said the radiator was warm—that it had not been there 15 minutes before.

Fischer asked whether there were any seat covers in it and he said there were not.

J. J. Sweeney, assistant manager of the Hotel Dixie, identified the register slip that Hathaway had signed.

Through Theodore E. Rowell, an assistant deputy warden at the Rhode Island state prison, Hathaway's signature on a fingerprint card was introduced.

Joseph H. Clark, handwriting expert, said this signature and that of John Sullivan on the Dixie register were written by the same man and was going into details when Attorney Hurley said the defense admitted the evidence as fact.

At the opening of court this morning, Judge Walsh, addressing the newspapermen, warned them against reporting any proceedings in the courtroom which took place in the absence of the jury. He also warned photographers against taking photos in the courthouse of any person at any time.

Vernon V. Galvin, chum of Hathaway, resumed the witness stand for cross-examination by Hurley. At times Hurley raised his voice to a loud pitch and trembled with emotion, but Galvin failed to crack.

WANTED TO STAY

Galvin took the witness stand and sat down. The first question that Hurley fired at him. Why he was sitting down. The witness replied that he preferred to.

Q—Now you testified yesterday that you told your mother when you returned from Winward lane that the girl looked dead? A—Yes.

Q—And you also said that Hathaway told you that he could see her hand turning blue? A—Yes.

Q—Wasn't that told you when he was trying to get you to go out with him? A—No.

Q—It was his desire to stay in your home in Fall River that night? A—Yes

Q—He wasn't running away at that time? A—No

Q—And then you went out and got into the car? A—Yes

Q—And it was then that he said that he was going to Stafford rd? A—No, he didn't say that.

Q—At some time you asked him what for? A—Yes.

Q—And you said to find the girl? A—Yes

Q—What did you say? A—I said: "You know she's not out there. I'll bet you 50 dollars she's at the hospital."

Q—And what did he say? A—He said: "Yes, she is."

NO QUESTIONS

Q—Now, along the road on your ride up to Stafford rd., did you ask him what the matter was with the girl? A—No.

Q—Did you ask what happened to the girl? A—No

Q—Did you ask how she happened to die? A—No

Q—Did Mr. Hathaway speak to you at any time from the time you left your house until you got out to Stafford rd. something like this, "I don't know what happened."

Day objected, objection was sustained, with the quotation, "I don't understand anything like that." There was another objection, which was sustained. At this point Hurley appeared angered, and made a statement in open court. The court ordered the statement stricken from the records.

There was a verbal tilt between Hurley and Judge Walsh. Hurley sought an exception to the judge's ruling, but the court finally granted him an exception and ordered the statement struck from the record. The court then ordered Hurley to proceed with his cross-examination

Q—Now, Mr. Galvin, at any time did Mr. Hathaway say to you after you left your house, "I don't understand it"?

Day objected. The court then ruled that he presumed that Hurley, by his examination along these lines, was going to introduce some testimony at some time or another along the lines of the question, and he permitted the witness to answer. The witness replied, "No."

Q—Do you remember him saying anything to this effect: "I don't know how it happened." A—No

Q—Do you deny that he said anything like that? A—I can only say that I don't remember.

Q—You didn't ask what happened out in Winward lane, did you? A—Yes.

Q—But you didn't ask any questions about how it happened, did you? A—No.

Q—Then all the time, from the time you left your house and went up to Mr. Mayes' and then to Stafford rd., you never made one inquiry as to what happened or how it happened? A—That's right

Q—Now, after you got out there to Winward lane there was just one piece of conversation?

McLyman objected. Court: "I'll let him answer.

Nolan then went over to Hurley and conferred with him. The question wasn't pressed. At this point Hurley made another statement pertaining to testimony. McLyman objected that it was a plain misstatement and misquoting of testimony on Hurley's part. The court sustained McLyman, and Hurley then sought to have part of the witness' testimony read from the record

NOTES OFFERED

The court granted Hurley's request, and the stenographer read from the record Galvin's testimony of yesterday where Galvin said that when he asked Hathaway what he was going to do about it, he said: "Nothing." And when he was asked by Galvin if he was going to leave the girl there in the ditch, he replied: "Sure, someone will find her there in the morning."

The stenographer also read the testimony where Galvin testified that when he asked Hathaway what it was all about, Hathaway said: "She told me that she was engaged to an interne at the hospital, we had an argument over it, and I hit her."

Q—Now you say, Mr. Galvin, that there was no further conversation relative to this striking? A—No.

Q—Did you at any time ask him "How'd she die?" or ask any questions about what happened? A—No.

Q—You said you said, 'Listen Hathaway, what do you know about this?" Objection by McLyman to the of questions. A, Yes.

Q—Are you sure you said: "Hathaway"? Another tilt. A, Yes.

NO NICKNAME

Q (low long have you known Mr Hathaway? A—Twelve years.

Q—As a matter of fact, you called him 'Pinky' didn't you? A—No.

Lowering his voice to a still higher pitch, Hurley snarled, over the objection of McLyman

Q—You want to high school him? A—Yes

Q—What was his nickname for you? McLyman objected. A "Chick

Q—He called you "Chick" no, you called him "Pinky" for the last 10 years. That's so, isn't it" A—No

At this point the court called a 10-minute recess

Q Mr. Galvin at any time of the time you left your house at 1 30 a m as you put it, to go to Winward lane, on the way out or back did Mr Hathaway say in substance: "I don't know how she died—I can't figure it out?" A—I don't remember that he said anything like that.

GALVIN HEARD ALL

Under re-direct examination by McLyman, Galvin testified that from the time Hathaway came to his home at 11.13 p. m. on the night of the murder, until they left after 12 all their conversation was in the parlor of Galvin's home.

Galvin testified that most of the time he was about a foot away from Hathaway and could hear distinctly everything said. He also said that all conversation between them in the auto on the way to and from the lane he heard distinctly

Q (McLyman)- What was your understanding as to where you were going when you left with him? A—To his garage to put up the car.

Q—And shortly after you started he spoke of going to the lane? A—Yes

Q—But you didn't go to the lane directly? A—No. He suggested we go some place where we could sit down and have a couple of drinks.

Q—Then he was in no hurry to go to the lane? A—He did not appear to be.

Q—So you both went over to Mayes' place to get some drinks? A—Yes

Q—Did you expect to find any girl there at the lane when you went there with Hathaway. Objection sustained

Q—Would you offered to bet Hathaway on it, didn't you? A.—Yes, I offered to bet him 50 dollars that the girl was back at the hospital.

Re-cross-examination by Hurley.

Q—In order to get you out of the house, Hathaway had to kick you, didn't he? A—No, he didn't kick me, he touched me with his foot

Q.—Then he wanted to go and sit down and get some drinks? A—Yes

Q.—But the place where you went is a place where you can buy and get your own? A—Right.

Q—So after getting the liquor you hurried out to the lane? A—We didn't hurry.

Q—Well you made no stop? A—No.

GALVIN EXCUSED

Q—(McLyman). But you stopped at Mayes' place, didn't you? A—Yes.

McLyman: That is all.

Hurley: That is all

Galvin stepped from the witness stand and walked slowly out of the courtroom. He pulled a handkerchief from his pocket, and mopped his neck. He did not look at Hathaway, but the defendant followed him with his eyes until he disappeared in the corridor.

The next witness was George L. Brown, toll collector on the Mt Hope bridge. He testified that a man resembling the defendant crossed the bridge and paid a toll to him about 2 a. m. March 24, the morning after the murder

He said that the man was alone in the car, wore a fur coat was smoking a cigarette, and had a mustache

Q—(Blacher)—Was he the man you saw (pointing at Hathaway)?

A—I wouldn't say for he resembled him.

He was excused

AUTO ON JOY ST.

Healey testified that on the morning of March 25 his attention was called to a closed car parked on Cambridge st., near Chambers. He testified that Patrolman Cuddy of the same station called to him, and he went over and looked at the car. That was about 12:25 a. m., he said He testified that in the car he saw a box of paper drinking cups, a monkey wrench and a robe.

Under cross-examination by Nolan, Healey testified that he touched nothing in the car, but waited for inspectors to arrive and take fingerprints.

Next witness was Patrolman Edward Nolan, Healey testified that he found the car in the West End on the morning of March 25.

Q—(Fischer) (pointing to Hathaway)—Did you see that man there? A—I roomed him in 805

Q—Did he have any baggage? A—No.

HAD NO BAGGAGE

Q—Did you have any conversation with him? A. Yes; after we got up to the room, he said to me: "How far is it to Greenwich Village?" I said: "Oh, that's pretty far downtown; a young fellow like you shouldn't go down there, they're liable to take all your money." He said: "Could I walk down there?" I said: Oh, no, you'll have to get a cab"

Q What name did he give there? A—Sullivan.

John J Sweeney, assistant manager of the hotel, identified an entry on the hotel register as that of John Sullivan of Moore st., Boston. He testified if Mr Hathaway had been carried, it would have been noted on the register. There was no baggage noted there, he said.

WRITING THE SAME

The next witness was John H. Clark, handwriting expert Testified that he had been a handwriting expert for over [illegible] that he had compared the signature of Hathaway [illegible] with that of John Sullivan on the Dixie register and that they were written by the same person

Here the noon recess was called, by Judge Walsh

The first witness in the afternoon session was John Foy, clerk at the Hotel Dixie. He [illegible] March 23 he was on night duty, and that early the following morning about 4 o'clock a man and a woman entered. The man asked him to change 50 cents, he said, so that he could telephone

McLyman asked Galvin to stand up in the rear of the courtroom, and the witness identified him as the man who made the phone call. He said that he could not identify the girl who was with him

The next witness was Andrew Steenson, Fall River, testified he was present at the Republican City Club rooms in Fall River on the afternoon of March 19 when two young men entered. One he said was Elliott Hathaway, whom he knew well. McLyman asked Galvin to rise from his seat, and Steenson identified him as Hathaway's companion

Mrs. Julia A. Galvin, mother of the State's star witness, testified in a voice that was [illegible] a whisper many points of her son's testimony of the happenings of the fatal night.

SCOLDED PLAYBOY

She scolded Hathaway for bringing girls to the house. He told her, she said, that he and the girl had been held up by bandits, that one had held a gun to him and the other had "grabbed the girl by the throat and punched her in the face."

It was Hathaway, she said, who proposed that Galvin wear his fur coat when they left the house.

When they returned from their night's outing she said [illegible] to the point where [illegible] phone and [illegible] neck about through a curtain into the [illegible]

"I tried to keep my boy from going to the station," she said of Galvin's trip to tell the police what Hathaway had shown him.

Galvin, she said, was greatly upset. Hathaway took a billfold from his pocket, she testified and said he had enough money to go away

ABOUT ADRIAN O'BRIEN

Joining NBC After Appearance Here

Radio Star Makes Stage Debut Saturday in Local Theater

Radio news seemed to be bursting all around the head of one Adrian O'Brien yesterday. Newspapers told of his signing up with NBC at $12,000 per annum, which is true enough. One of our "esteemed up" contemporaries, however, told how O'Brien was discharged from WNAC by Linus Travers. Now that story proved to be news indeed, insofar as O'Brien himself was concerned. Up until a la'e hour yesterday, the sweet singer, claimed by countless fans to be better than Morton Downey, was not informed he was finished at the Buckminster studios. All of which would indicate that said dismissal was in no way definite.

It may be that somebody, somewhere, was attempting to take "Obie" for a ride. It appears to be deep stuff, anyway. Here's the really big news, printed following a vigorous investigation, requiring this department to spend an afternoon out in the rain tracking down Mr. O'Brien. It was thought Adrian might reveal the actual facts, since the press ballyhoo affected him so vitally. He was found, and where do you suppose he was? If you can't guess, read on. This is what they call exclusive, in newspaper language. In radio circles it's nothing if not irony.

Called to Footlights . . . .

Comfortably seated in a large brown leather chair, with Frank Mahler, his accompanist and close friend, this 21-year-old New England radio sensation came to terms in connection with a personal stage appearance for RKO. Harry McDonald, divisional manager for the latter in these parts, closed with O'Brien for a week's booking at the Keith-Boston Theater, beginning Saturday.

Furthermore, his salary is something to write home about, which he would do were it not for the fact that he lives in Dorchester. Having negotiated his NBC arrangement, effective June 28, along with this theater engagement, Adrian O'Brien is sleeping with ease tonight, thank you. Is everybody happy?

So the wet feet weren't at all bad when acquired in pursuit of facts such as these. Yesterday wasn't so dull at that.

Radio "location" is a new term snared by the broadcasters from movietown. It means the setting. For example, Cap'n Bill and Brother Ealey (formerly Uncle Abe and David to you) bring their new bit to the air supposedly from Bucksport, Maine, where the characters will be seated on barrels or boxes no doubt. It's all about two Down East cronies, who haven't spoken to each other for years. Brother John undertakes to reconcile them. The feature gets under way June 22 (next Monday) through WEEI.

Remember those Nit-Wits are coming back to the air waves on Monday, June 22, to be heard again on June 29. After that their "earings" shift to Wednesdays

Difficult to Describe . . . .

Don't hold it against McNamee or Husing if that regatta broadcast sounded dull and flat, coming through from Poughkeepsie on Tuesday afternoon. Shell races on the air are about as interesting as a case of near beer. Unless, of course, one has a brother or a son rowing in one of the shells.

Inventive genius marks the latest creation of the CBS Gloom Chasers (WNAC at 8:45 p. m.). They have perfected a substance destined to revolutionize the phonograph record industry. Imagine a mixture of hot sealing wax and Mexican jumping beans, which causes records to turn over without the touch of a human hand. Get the idea?

N. F. T.

On the Air

Microphones weren't at the Harvard and Yale commencements, but they will be above and around the Thames river tomorrow when CBS and CBS report the annual Harvard-Yale crews. At 10 a. m. A. S. T. p. m. WNAC and WBZ will carry the varsity race, Ted Husing describing for the former and for the latter Paul Dumont and Robert Harron, N. Y. sports writer.

Geraldine Farrar, Marion Talley, Anna Case, John McCormack and Cyrena Van Gordon will appear in a five-week sponsored series on a WJZ network, starting June 23 . . . When Uncle Abe and David return to the air June 22 they will be known as the Stebbins Boys and will have a third member in their nightly series, Parke Fennelly. . . .

NBC scored a triumph today with the Farm and Home hour offering. Announcers along Chicago's Michigan Boulevard described the parade of the pick of the stockyards, perfect examples of roast beef and sirloin steak on the hoof.

CBS is still making wholesale catches of artists. "Whispering" Jack Smith soon will start a sustaining series and so will Fray and Braggiotti, piano duo. And the Boswell Sisters, recently signed up, get underway over WAAB at 9:15 this eve. . . Natalie Tower, CBS "television girl," just signed for exclusive showing on Dial next Tuesday. Televisioners are having their troubles. Artists who are to be seen on the radio, screen or stage they are said, regardless of the shade and quantity of their hair. How One Woman Lost 102 Lbs. of Fat

Almost Unbelievable—Nevertheless True

Dear Friends:

You advertise Kruschen Salts for reducing, so I finally tried them and when I started I weighed 229 pounds and when I took them for a year and 3 weeks, I lost exactly 102 pound.

I am 23 years old and I look at least 5 years younger now than I did when I was fat. I have a picture of myself before and after so if you want to see them let me know.

I am always telling friends about the wonderful [illegible] I am always advertising th.

I took 2 bottles every month for a year and 3 weeks. It amounted to $25 for reducing 102 pounds; but it was worth it.

If I can be of any help to you let me know.

You can hasten the reducing action of Kruschen by going lighter on potatoes, pastry and fatty meats.

Unlike other Salts, Kruschen doesn't reduce by rushing food thru your system. Rather it's an ideal blend of 6 separate mineral salts which help every gland, nerve and body organ to function properly.

Women everywhere are overjoyed with this reducing treatment. Frequently pound by pound of surplus fat leaves and soon you possess that trim, slender figure you're always craved.

An 58c bottle of Kruschen (lasts 4 weeks) is sold by leading druggists the world over—so start this SAFE method to lose ugly fat TODAY!

BEAUTIFUL CHOIR SINGER, MINISTER ARE FOUND MURDERED IN OPEN BOAT

"THE MURDER OF THE CHOIR SINGER"
BY ANTHONY ABBOTT

FOREWORD

The classic criminal case of the New York police was unquestionably the strange death of the Rev. Timothy Beazeley, D. D., and of Evelyn Saunders, his beautiful choir singer.

To the connoisseur in crime this singular case surpasses by every token such enigmas as the chloroforming of Dot King, the Elwell shooting, the assassination of Rothstein, or the disappearance of Judge Crater. And while it bore a certain family resemblance to the Hall-Mills murders in New Jersey, and, in some particulars, was similar to the atrocious Richeson case in Cambridge, Mass., the Beazeley-Saunders problem still remains triumphant in its own mysterious individuality.

Such an affair, set on a stage of fashion, family and High Church, police and politics well deserved the name it got [illegible] Will return—the Crime of the Century.

It is true that no one has yet gone to the electric chair for the killing of the clergyman and the woman for whom he broke his vows as husband and as priest. Apparently the case was dropped. But those best informed could tell you that the facts were neither hushed up by influence nor bungled by stupidity.

The authorities actually did know the truth.

Thatcher Colt, police commissioner of New York city, knew who killed the Rev. Timothy Beazeley and Evelyn Saunders. With astonishing swiftness he discovered not only the identity of the guilty, but also why Beazeley and Mrs. Saunders were killed where and when, and who shared in the deed.

Why, then were these discoveries kept from the public?

TOLD FOR THE FIRST TIME

The reasons for the official silence was told here for the first time. With the recent departure from this country of two persons who would be most affected, and who, under changed names, will finish their lives in a different land, I am able, at last, to make public all the facts.

As his secretary I worked with Colt throughout the investigation of the several murder mysteries which he solved, including the Beazeley-Saunders affair. This narrative of how the Commissioner unraveled the tangled snarl of that monstrous tragedy is taken from my official notes made at the time and often on the scene.

Anthony Abbot.

The two bodies were found one premature summer evening in early June. As I have every cause to remember, the clergyman and the choir singer were killed at nearly the same hour that a South American liner—the Iluxine—went to the bottom, off the Florida Keys, with the loss of many passengers.

To the police and clergy of Manhattan, however, that humid and breathless night will always be recalled as the fantastic occasion when uniformed patrolmen went about New York City ringing the doorbells of Episcopal rectories, and calling ministers of the Gospel from their beds.

But until nearly midnight of that scorching Monday, no one in the police department harbored such rousing designs against sleep of the righteous. All the force was hoping for a good thunderstorm as Thatcher Colt and I worked alone in the Police Commissioner's private office at the north end of the Headquarters Building on Centre st.

Colt's greenshaded eyes were fixed on a manuscript an address which he was scheduled to present to the annual convention of the New York State Association of Chiefs of Police opening in Syracuse the following day. Incidentally, his speech dealt with the new technique called "Mousage," introduced into police circles by Dr. Ferdinand Walzek, of Vienna. On this valuable new means of solving crimes by the taking of wax or plaster casts of evidence, Thatcher Colt had already made substantial improvements. But the speech outlining his improved method was never to be delivered.

TWO DEAD IN BOAT

As I sorted my papers, the office door opened very quietly and Capt. Israel Henry, the silver-haired guardian of the outer door to the commissioner's suite, entered softly, cleared his throat and said:

"Excuse me, Mr. Commissioner, but I've just got a telephone call."

"Yes, Henry?"

"A rowboat was drifting down the East river and bumped into a motor-launch. Fellow in the launch yelled and one of our patrol boats heard the holler and took charge of the dingey and towed it to the Bellevue wharf. Two dead bodies in the rowboat."

"Gangsters?"

"No, sir. One body was a man who by his clothes looked like a preacher. The other was a woman."

"Murder?"

"No doubt of it, sir."

For a moment Thatcher Colt's brows drew together in a thoughtful furrow. After two strenuous years without a holiday, Colt had been told by his physician that he must take a rest. I knew that he had planned for a month's vacation in the Canadian wilderness, a roughing adventure to begin after the Syracuse convention.

He pressed a button and Chambliss, the stenographer at once reported.

"Take this telegram: 'President New York State Association of Chiefs of Police, Hotel Onondaga, Syracuse, New York. Sorry that emergency makes attendance at convention impossible. Please extend my regrets and best wishes to the officers and members of your organization.' See that goes directly, Chambliss."

As he was dictating the message Thatcher Colt rose from his desk, seized his Panama hat and walking-stick, and lifted a white gardenia from the Pompeiian lear vase on his desk. As he fixed the flower in his lapel, he asked:

"Where are the bodies now?"

"Still in the boat. Tied up at the Morgue dock at 29th St. The Medical Examiner was notified and is sending Doctor Multouler down there. I'll tell everybody else. I talked to Patrolman Harris on the post myself, and he told me nobody had touched anything."

"Hold up sending any one else down there until I give you the word," Colt requested. "Mr. Abbot will telephone you when to act."

In the elevator, Thatcher Colt looked at me quizzically.

"Weren't you driving up to Cape Cod tonight to see Betty

For a long time Thatcher Colt stared down in somber melancholy on the rowboat and its strange cargo.

FREDERIC MARCH IN "THE MARRIAGE BED" FILM

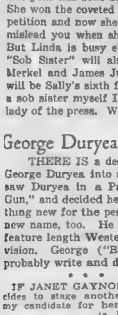
By HARRIET PARSONS
Universal Service Motion Picture Editor
Copyright, 1931, by Universal Service, Inc.

LOS ANGELES, June 18—Ernest Pascal's story, "The Marriage Bed," will soon be seen in its third medium. "The Marriage Bed" started out in life as a novel, appeared next in footlight form with Owen Moore, Alice Joyce and Doris Lloyd in the Los Angeles production, and later had a Broadway run with Allan Dinehart in the leading role. Now it's to be a talkie, starring the popular Frederic March.



Harriet Parsons

Pathe grabbed the play during the West Coast run, but failed to do anything about it in the excitement of the merger with RKO. Now Paramount has purchased it with Frederic March definitely in mind.

It's a modern problem play, dealing, as you may suspect, with marital complications. Ought to be a good contrast to "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde," March's next.

* * *

KEEP YOUR EYE on Sally Eilers. This last year has seen Sally step right up among the top-notchers. She won the coveted title role in "Bad Girl" against heavy competition and now she is to do "Sob Sister." No, L. O. P. didn't mislead you when she announced Linda Watkins for the part. But Linda is busy elsewhere and Sally steps into the breach. "Sob Sister" will also have James Todd, John Arledge, Una Merkel and James Junne in the cast, Al Santell directing. It will be Sally's sixth for Fox in an amazingly short time. Being a sob sister myself I am anxious to see Sally's conception of a lady of the press. We are usually a much maligned lot.

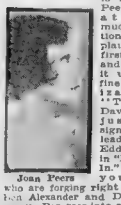
George Duryea May Be Western Star

THERE IS a deep-laid plot on foot at RKO-Pathe to turn George Duryea into a Western star. Producer Charles Rogers saw Duryea in a Pathe Western comedy, titled "Pardon My Gun," and decided he was the ideal cowboy type. This is something new for the personable, well-mannered George. He gets a new name, too. He will be billed as Tom Keene in a series of feature length Westerns, which he will do under Rogers' supervision. George ("Big House" and "Min and Bill") Hill will probably write and direct the first of the series.

* * *



Joan Peers

IF JANET GAYNOR ever decides to stage another walkout my candidate for her successor is little Joan Peers. Joan attracted much attention in "Applause," her first picture, and followed it up with a fine characterization in "Tonia" at Paramount-Long Island. She's just been signed for the lead opposite Eddie Quillan in "Eddie Cantor." Two other youngsters who are forging right ahead are Ben Alexander and Donald Dillaway. Ben goes into a good part in "Are These Our Children?" which Wesley Ruggles is directing for Radio Pictures. Dillaway, who scored in "Min and Bill," gets the juvenile lead opposite Maureen O'Sullivan in Tommy Meighan's next for Fox, titled "Skyline." Director, Sam Taylor.

* * *

HAVE TO admit my predecessor, L. O. P., certainly clicks on most of her rumors. That hot tip of hers that Tom Mix would return to pictures shortly turns out to be the real thing. As soon as the circus season is over and all the little boys have stopped peeking through the holes in the tent flap, Tom will gallop back to Hollywood to make at least four pictures for Universal. Look for him about September, diamond belt buckle, monogrammed shirt, solid silver six-shooters and all. Any suggestions as to the kind of pictures you'd like to see him in?

* * *

THERE HAS been a lot of talk that Paramount is grooming Wynne Gibson to step into Ruth Chatterton's shoes when Ruthie trundles her makeup box over to Warner. But then there is a lot of talk out here about a lot of things that never materialize. A bit of news which seems to substantiate the rumor is the fact that Miss Gibson will play the Pauline Frederick role in the talkie version of Clyde Fitch's play, "The Woman in the Case." What with all the old plays being renovated life must be getting awfully dull for mother and grandmother. Soon they'll know just what's coming after the first sequence and there's no fun in that.

* * *

A SECOND vehicle has been selected for Lil Dagover, much heralded German importation. Lil used to be the bombshell of Berlin, but now she's the Warner Brothers whirlwind. After "I Spy" she will make "Cutuin," a play by Giovacchino Forzano, produced with sensational success in Berlin and Italy. I don't know either the lady or the play but remembering how Dietrich lived up to advance billing.

* * *

Bowdoin Square

There is an entertaining picture program, together with seven vaudeville acts, at the Bowdoin. The film, "Extravagance," is one of the features. This companion picture is D. W. Griffith's "Abraham Lincoln," with Walter Houston, Una Merkel and Hobart Bosworth. The vaudeville offers the Silver Slipper dancers, Danny Cavanaugh, master of ceremonies, and other good acts. Tomorrow night bargain night is observed with eight acts and a film feature.

Nan Halperin opened at the Metropolitan today as the star of the stage presentation "The Little Revue." ■ the screen there is Janet Gaynor in "Daddy Long Legs."

Movie Career for Maine Girl

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

Dorothy Appleby has arrived at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios on the Coast, and is soon to go on the set for her first film under a long-term contract. This will be good news to her Maine friends, and to those who knew her in Boston when her sister, Miss Queenie Appleby, lived here. Dorothy made a hit on stage half a dozen years ago, one of her last roles Appleby was that of Connie Sinclair, done recently on screen here by Dorothy Jordan, in "Young Sinners." She had previously appeared in "Princess April," "Greenwich Village Follies," "Square Crooks."

Dorothy Appleby

The Appleby sisters are well known in Portland, Me. It was while Dorothy was in that city's high school that Rudolph Valentino selected her as the representative Pine Tree State beauty, and she became "Miss Maine."

Dorothy is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George K. Appleby, of Portland.

Screen Shorts

Film cutters are planning a production all their own. It will be a comedy with only one player —Charlie Ruggles. Ruggles, it seems, just can't refrain from wise-cracking or doing a little clowning after the director has "cut" the scene, but while the cameras and sound apparatus are still running. Consequently these ed lib lines and comical bits of pantomime are recorded on sound track and film. So when the "rushes" of his latest picture revealed a lot of funny episodes that were not a part of the script, cutters decided to take the small bits from this and other Ruggles pictures and piece them together into a one-reel comedy.

* * *

John St. Polis, veteran Boston player, has been added to the cast of "Kisses by Command" from the original, "The Strange Woman," by Ivan Lebedeff and Benn W. Levy. Lebedeff is doing a featured role. Genevieve Tobin, Betty Compson and Ralf Harolde are others of the featured players in this drama of Russian loves and intrigues being directed by Richard Boleslavsky.

Pops Tonight

Music of the Dance will comprise the program to be presented by Arthur Fiedler at the Pop concert in Symphony Hall tonight, which is as follows

Acting Banned on Movie Lot

At last! A director who doesn't want acting. Sounds strange, but it is a fact.

"I don't want anybody to act," he cautioned.

Eyebrows lifted.

"I mean that," continued Brenon. "This picture is to reproduce situations and people as they really exist in life. I want you to forget you are actors and do things naturally."

MRS. SOLOMON SAYS—WOMAN WINS IN LIFE "BY A NOSE"

By HELEN ROWLAND

MY DAUGHTER, hear now the Prayer of Every Damsel, which she chanteth in her secret heart.

O, Lord, grant me a Perfect Nose!

For, verily, verily, "by a nose" is the race of Life won or lost, for a woman!

Deny me dimples if Thou wilt, and refuse me curling hair; let my feet be twin Canoeders, and my figure resemble a cartoon. But give me an appealing NOSE, and I shall be comforted.

HELEN ROWLAND.

A nose that curveth upward, as a question, saying, "Do I meet with thine approval?"

A nose that can be called "cute."

A nose that holdeth the powder and doth not shine as a soap advertisement; that goeth not red when I weep, neither turneth blue when I am cold.

A nose that blendeth with picture hats and flapper clothes.

For a woman may be admired for her figure and adored for her eyes, but it is her nose which causeth her to be cherished and petted and pitied.

Go to! A woman with a classic profile spendeth all her days in the struggle to live UP to the nobility and dignity thereof.

But a woman with a retrousse nose is forgiven for whatever she may do, from fibbing to murder.

She looketh SO helpless and childish!

A woman with a strong nose will be accounted strong and permitted to bear her own burdens through life; but a woman with a "baby nose" will be "babied" and carried through life, tenderly, in a limousine.

A woman with a sharp nose must speak sweetly lest she be accounted a shrew; but a woman with a wee nose may be peevish and still be accounted a "darling."

Alas, I know not wherefore men should be so simple.

But every woman knoweth in her heart that I speak the truth!

Therefore, grant me, I pray thee, a Perfect Nose, a cunning nose, a piquant, a beautiful nose—and I will do the REST!

SELAH!

Simple Living Necessary to Check T.B.

By DR. R. S. COPELAND

ONE OF the most common and wide-spread of all diseases is tuberculosis. This disease at one time accounted for more deaths than any other plague known to mankind.

Following Koch's discovery of the tuberculosis germ in 1882, great strides were made towards control of the disease. While not continuing to be too prevalent, it does not excite the terror and fear it formerly did.

Dr. Copeland

This change has been brought about by a more thorough understanding of the disease. It is now possible to cure many cases of tuberculosis. Where a cure is not possible, life has been materially prolonged and made more tolerable.

It has been said that the only persons who know how to live are those with tuberculosis. This is true to a certain degree. In the modern conception of the disease, ideal surroundings and healthful manner of living are made imperative. The patients are taught that simple hygienic living is necessary for a cure. In following this cure they learn how health-promoting and enjoyable such living can be.

Though the disease may be found among the rich, it is more prevalent among the poor. The prevention of the disease thus becomes a social problem, as well as a medical one.

Poverty, poor food, tenement houses, over work and worry are productive of physical conditions favorable to infection. With the increase of wages, improvement in food and housing facilities, this disease has decreased in its occurrence among the poor.

Answers to Health Queries

E. D. Q.—What causes dizziness?

2—What do you advise for indigestion?

3—What will relieve head noises?

A—Dizziness may be due to a circulatory disturbance, to an eye or ear condition, or to some intestinal disturbance. An examination will determine the exact cause and then definite treatment can be prescribed.

2—Correct your diet and avoid constipation.

3—Nasal catarrh is often responsible for this trouble and should be treated.

Larry Takes Mary Lou to Jenny

"YOU COULDN'T face the situation or Lorry?" asked Larry of Mary Lou.

"Lorry," she admitted, finally. "It was all so confusing and unexpected. But I had known for ages that I had to get away."

"You didn't have to save yourself," said Larry; "you ran to save him. It was unnecessary. If you had stayed you might have learned that Delight Hartford is really Mrs. Somebody Else, and that Lorrimer didn't want her, never would want her—"

"How was I to know?" asked Mary Lou, reasonably, watching the black landscape slide by, watching the lights of homes shine through the darkness.

"You couldn't know, of course. You and Lorrimer were a precious pair of idealistic babies," Larry grumbled, "you, with your desire to see justice done and Lorrimer with his idiotic proposal to Delight—"

"He did ask her to marry him then?" cried Mary Lou.

"He did. But, as she said, she had a previous engagement," laughed Larry.

Mary Lou said, soberly:

"He must have cared."

"He did not care. He felt under an obligation, that's all. You know that's just what he would do."

"Yes." She was silent, staring out into the night, not as sure as Larry that Lorrimer did not care."

At the station they picked up a taxi and drove out to the Wynnes', where they found Jenny reading six novels at once and trying to make up her mind to go to bed early for the first time in several years. She rushed to the door as she heard them talking to the servant who opened it, and caught Mary Lou in her strong, young arms.

"You found her; you brought her back!" she shrieked to Larry and embraced him shamelessly while still holding on to her recovered friend. Her mother and father strolled into the hall to see what it was all about. They had been told; they knew the entire story, and the way in which they undemonstratively, figuratively and matter-of-factly took Mary Lou to their hearts was very pleasant for the rest of the reception committee to view.

"That night, curled up on Jenny's bed Mary Lou filled in the gaps, supplied the missing details and ended, anxiously:

"So I came out. What is one to do when Larry sets his mind on anything?"

"Marry him; it's the quickest way to definite his position," answered Jenny promptly, "but, unfortunately, I have a monopoly of that subject."

Mary Lou laughed. The color was back in her cheeks, she looked rested, happier. Loneliness is a wasting illness, and if Jenny and Larry were not cures they were, at least, palliatives.

"But I can't stay," she went on, "I have to get back and go on with that course. Nor could I stay on and—keeping on avoiding Lorry."

"Well, he isn't here and we won't tell him that you are, and you know he never comes over except on special occasions. We're always had to run after him," Jenny soothed her. "You skip off to your room and get some sleep. I'm telephoning Aunt Margaret in the morning."

So, in the morning, Margaret Lorrimer came over and saw Mary Lou, alone, in a corner of the dining room where she waited for her, a small, rather forlorn figure, but with the scarlet flame of romance flown in her cheeks and her eyes bright and clear. Margaret went swiftly to her and took her in her arms.

"I—I thought you'd be—furious with me," gasped Mary Lou, "but I couldn't help it, Lady Margaret. It all seemed so unfair—to her—to Lorry. I had to try and clear things up, but you understand I never thought she would come out to Westwood. I planned to talk to you and beg you to see her and then to tell Lorry the truth. That was all."

"I know. No, I'm not furious. I was, for a few minutes," Margaret smiled, "but not any more. And it all worked out for the best."

THREE SHADES ON FROCK

Mme. Yteb's Startling Model

SKETCHED IN PARIS

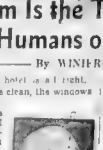
Mme. Yteb uses three shades of yellow georgette in the evening dress sketched. The draped bodice and the sides and back of the skirt are of palest yellow, while medium yellow and orange are combined in the twisted belt and flaring panels at the front of the skirt. The bodice is slightly draped low in the back as well as in front.

Charm Is the Thing, Whether in Humans or Tea Rooms

By WINIFRED BLACK

YES, THE hotel is all right. The rooms are clean, the windows are bright.

The food is good—as hotel food goes—the coffee is never quite hot enough, to be sure, but it's fairly good not decagon to be complained about.



Winifred Black

He does seem a trifle bored, but he's never cross.

They never suggest the oyster the other, and they don't pounce on your soup, if it's up like a wolf.

The beds are comfortable—enough.

But somehow I don't like the place.

I shall never come here again, and I shall never send any friend to stay here.

The hotel on the last place we stayed was different.

In the dining room there was always a flower or two on your table, and the head waiter acted as if he'd been waiting for the joy of your coming for uncounted years.

Your own particular waiter whispered a hint as to what was good today, or what was not so particularly interesting.

There was no Peacock Alley for the strutting peacocks that haunt every smart hotel.

Nothing so crude as that—but there were little discreet corners, where you could sit and talk things over with a friend.

The tea room faced on a busy street, you could sit at your table and watch the World and his Wife and Daughter, stepping smartly past—and yet, there was something intimate and personal and comfy about that tea room.

The whole place had Charm. That is it. Charm is the word. And what a difference it makes!

I have a friend I have always found and she is kind and sweet and intelligent, you can't help but wish good and kind and sweet unto him, but I don't want to live with good and kind and sweet husband.

But there's something lacking in Helen.

Charm—that's what's lacking, dear old Helen. I wonder if it is too late for her to learn Charm? It would make life such a different story to her if she had it.

It seems a pity doesn't it?

Thin Velvet Frocks in Summer

BY PARIS BUREAU

PARIS, June 18—The reducing treatment to which velvet has been subjected has given it a longer lease on life. And so that is why we are no longer astonished to see a velvet frock for Summer. It was not very long ago that we were wont to regard that fabric as purely a material for Winter wear. But when we remember how thick, heavy and stiff were the weaves formerly used for velvet, it isn't to be wondered that our velvet frocks graced only the formal functions of Winter.

Now we have changed all that, and we wear velvet in the Summer just as we have made wool fabrics part of our warm weather equipment. Very clever, these textile experts, aren't they?

The new, thin, almost sheer velvets now being shown are perfectly lovely and are being used not only for dresses but for negligees and pajamas, while there is much talk of velvet bathing suits and velvet lingerie.

Worth is one of the dressmakers who is sponsoring the use of Summer velvet, and he has employed it in all sorts of lovely cloths. Shown today is a lovely model in glimmering, thin white velvet trimmed with bands of orange and deep purple velvet. The twisted belt matches the band trimming on the deep bertha. The skirt is plain and close fitting over the hips and flares generously from the knee down.

Some of the newest evening frocks are using color in original fashion. As witness, a frock made of three shades of yellow. The model, by Mme. Yteb, is in three shades of yellow georgette with the draped bodice and the sides and back of the skirt of palest yellow, and medium yellow and orange combine in the twisted belt and flaring front skirt panels.

Faithfully yours,

Martha Lee

Miss Fairfax Tells Her to Quit Boy

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX

I have loved a young man for a year and I still do but I don't think he cares for me. He makes dates with me but does not keep them. He says he loves me, but I don't believe he does. I do anything for him. I deny myself all that a young girl of my age should enjoy. I am 18 years old. I never go out but with him. If I talk to another boy, he gets terribly jealous. He is planning to go to Europe for a vacation. He says he is coming back in three months, but I don't believe him. What should I do? Do you think I ought to go out and enjoy myself? LONESOME AND BLUE.

Dear Lonesome: It seems to me that the young man is too sure of you and may be bored because you've let yourself become an echo of his moods. Nothing could be out of a mistake than to become a "yes girl" in a mistaken attempt to achieve popularity. If you accept date-breaking as a matter of course, there is no incentive on the date-breaker's part to treat you better. And honestly, don't you think at 18 you're a wee bit young to take such a heart-long plunge into romance as you're taking? Be something, amount to something, start in right now, instead of wasting precious time and youth worrying over an indifferent boy. Yes by all means cultivate other

Wedding Day Is the Bride's

By MRS. REECKMAN

DEAR MRS. REECKMAN:

There is to be a wedding in our family and "A" claims that the mother and father of the bride arrange things to suit themselves as they are paying for the wedding. "B" says that the bride and groom do as they please and the parents just pay.

Kindly explain this to me in your column as I find a lot of help in it. MOTHER.

This is putting the matter rather bluntly, but "B" is really right. The wedding day is the bride's day, and she usually is allowed—within reason—to have her plans carried out as she wishes. And that is as it should be, as we hope she is, a girl of taste and judgment and devotion to her mother who will naturally wish to adapt her plans to their budget-possibilities. In other words, unless parents can pay they should try to carry out her dreams to her own wedding, but she should not be over in her demands, if she needs be.

"Miss" Answers the Telephone

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

In a business office when a single girl answers the telephone and upon being asked "Who is speaking?" should she say "Miss Brown" or "Mary Brown?"

There has been a discussion in regard to this and your advice on this subject will be appreciated a great deal. I. A.

She should use the formal "Miss Brown" when she answers the telephone in a business office.

DELICACIES FOR PORCH OR LAWN

By MARTHA LEE

HERE ARE the recipes that I told you about over the radio the other morning, but didn't have time to finish over the air. They are especially adapted to serving on the porch or lawn if you are fortunate enough to be the proud possessor of either of these.

Martha Lee

I haven't been for a good many years until now, and maybe were not enjoying the green peas and garden.

Firstly, I want you to try this stuffed tomato salad.

STUFFED TOMATO SALAD

6 firm medium-sized tomatoes
½ cup diced celery
1 cup cooked green peas
½ cup diced cucumbers
¼ cup French dressing
Mayonnaise

Peel the tomatoes by plunging first in boiling water and then in cold. Remove part of the pulp. Sprinkle well inside with salt and let stand inverted for half an hour. Mix celery, peas, cucumbers and French dressing and chill 15 minutes in refrigerator. Fill tomato cups with this mixture and place on beds of crisp lettuce. Garnish with mayonnaise and capers. Serves six.

GLORIFIED RICE.

1 cup steamed rice
1 cup whipping cream
1 tbsps. confectioner's sugar
½ cup chopped nuts.

Whip cream and fold in drained rice and sugar, and nuts if desired. Chill thoroughly in refrigerator and serve in sherbert glasses.

Faithfully yours,

Martha Lee

I KNEW YOU'D LIKE IT, FLO. RINSO IS GREAT FOR DISHES, TOO

These thick, safe suds give whiter washes!

THERE are all degrees of whiteness. If you want to get the whitest white that clothes can be—try Rinso!

Rinso is different from any laundry soap you have ever used. Its rich, creamy suds soak out the dirt. Clothes come so white they don't need to be boiled. Even grimy cuffs and edges come clean with ease. Hot or no rubbing. Clothes last much longer.

Can't keep thrifty Rinso a secret—enough suds in just a few cupfuls of sudsy soaps—it's a fact. And it's safe. The makers of 40 well-known washing machines recommend it.

COMMODITIES AND THE RAILS ARE LINKED

By FRANK H. McLOON

Continued current firming of commodity prices could easily bring increases in orders that would give the railroads a gratifying rise in earnings, according to well-informed State St. observers. Just now the rails occupy the center of the stage in the stock market, with most of a performance being prevented either by the bulls or the bears.

* * *

Bulls point to the steady falling off in volume as evidence of the unwillingness of investors and speculators to sell their stocks at current prices. The bears say it shows the general withdrawal of both investors and speculators from an unpromising market.

Canada Dry Ginger Ale, Inc., of which P. D. Saylor is president, with plants in the Bay State, achieves this distinction in the record of earning practically its entire dividend for the fiscal year in the first eight months thereof. Mr. Saylor has not been afraid to expand at a time when numerous other industries were timidly retrenched. His aggressive advertising campaign has been a big factor in sales stimulation.

Some good buying of General Electric was accompanied by reports of a 40 per cent increase in the sale of refrigerators in the metropolitan New York district. No depression exists, at least in the electric refrigeration industry, announced Howard E. Blood, president of the Norge corporation, division of Borg-Warner. He commented on the fact that increased orders of Norge refrigerators for immediate delivery from distributors in the country over forced the company into capacity production.

Efforts to curtail operations and output by the copper, oil and steel industries are the most encouraging news reported in the financial districts. The copper industry shuts down a number of non-profitable copper and lead mines, and the oil industry has virtually widened its Texas agreement to cover from a number of the new gushing fields.

* * *

The situation is abnormal in the oil industry, when curtailment proceeds at a faster pace than current public consumption. There is also oddity in the firm maintenance of 1930 prices for motor fuel in the face of sharply lowered gasoline prices.

The Board Room Wit tells of an Oklahoma agriculturist who filed a bankruptcy petition as soon as it was announced the drillers had "struck oil" on his farm.

Some of the brokerage house market letter writers are doing some great word juggling to produce their "daily dozen" paragraphs on the market outlook without committing themselves too definitely.

American Bureau of Metal Statistics, issuing figures this week on lead production finds it advisable to explain that a short ton consists of 2000 pounds. In view of the class of readers the statistics would be likely to interest, one might not unreasonably assume that such an elementary piece of arithmetic would be known to each people. The flat thing dawns on reading the statistics, however, was to ask the nearest young college graduate how many pounds were in a short ton. He didn't know, and appeared to think a short ton something calling for police action.

Here is one for Mr. Ripley. A Boston investment banker had his car crushed twice in Brockton yesterday. Each of the two drivers who hit his sport roadster was out selling insurance against automobile collisions.

"Drug, Inc., receives the most favorable comment of all issues from authorities this week."

Detroit Prices of Bread Are Lowered

Detroit, June 18 - Major bakeries here have reduced retail price of bread, white and whole wheat, to 10 cents from 12 and 13 cents on the 1½-pound loaf, and to eight from nine and 10 cents on the one-pound loaf. Those making cuts were Purity Baking Co. Continental Baking Co. Ward Baking Co., General Baking Co. and Gordon Baking Co.

'Pennsy' Loadings Decrease in Week

Pennsylvania Railroad System, during the week ended June 13, handled 117,650 revenue freight cars, against 121,622 a week ago and 148,409 in the same week of 1930.

Loadings from Jan 1 to June 13 totaled 2,789,306, as against 3,467,744 in the corresponding period of the previous year.

Today's News of Live Stocks in Wall Street

General conditions in the stock market were unchanged today, and dullness was again the outstanding feature. The session appeared to be contesting with yesterdays market for the record of the dullest market in six years.

From the middle of 1926 until yesterday transactions on the big board did not fall under a million shares for any but abbreviated Saturday sessions.

Cotton Belt Line Feature of Rails

St. Louis Southwestern (Cotton Belt) common, in a quick 5¼ point jump to 52, was the feature of the low-priced rails today. Demand for the stock was based on an offer of Southern Pacific to exchange one share of its stock now selling around 80 for each three shares of Cotton Belt. Consummation of the deal awaits official sanction of the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Preferred Stock Stays Off Tape

St. Louis Southwestern preferred, which jumped 10 points yesterday in a handful of sales, did not appear on the tape all the forenoon today.

Johns-Manville Mirrors Dullness

Lower Dividend Talk on Alcohol

There was revived talk today of a lower dividend for U. S. Industrial Alcohol. The stock soon receded to around its old low for 1931.

Indiana Standard Little Affected

Dullness of today's trading Standard Oil of Indiana showed a minor decline. The recent omission of dividends on Mexican Petroleum, a subsidiary of Pan American Petroleum which is controlled by Standard of Indiana, had scant effect on the stock.

Alaska Juneau Off Eight on the Move

New York Traction Stocks Are Sought

Opportunity for speculation in New York City traction stocks was in progress for the acquisition of important subway and elevated lines by the Brooklyn Manhattan Transit is the favorite in this class, the stock today moving up 2 points to the best price since more than a month. Bonds of the traction companies were also in good demand.

R. J. Reynolds' Record Sales

May is said to have been a record month for the sale of cigarettes by R. J. Reynolds. The advertising campaign of the company has been pleasing to the progressive growth of the business. The stock has been showing resistance when selling has developed, indicating that there is an underlying demand for the issue. Most of this buying has been credited to interests who are informed on the company's affairs and outlook.

Sears Roebuck Quietly Bought

Steady absorption is said to be taking place in sears Roebuck and according to some traders has been largely obscured by the wider publicity given Montgomery Ward's position. Accumulation of Sears is understood to be based on predictions that net for the current six months will almost match the first half of 1930 result, despite slightly lower sales.

$7,000,000 Profit for U. S. Steel

There has been considerable discussion around Wall Street regarding second quarter earnings. Much of the comment hinges on the side of the Very Heat Light & Power Co. which were consolidated with the beginning of the current quarter. It has been the understanding that the Steel Corporation realized a profit of somewhere in the neighborhood of $7,000,000 on this transaction. There is considerable speculation as of whether this will be shown as special income for the second quarter or allocated over the remainder of the year. It is also possible that it may be held out until the results of the entire year are compiled

New Pool in United Aircraft?

Rumors in the Street have it that a new pool is being formed for operations in United Aircraft. In some quarters it is contended the comparative firmness of the stock at times recently has been due to the fact that members of this group were accumulating the stock quietly. Confirmation is not obtainable.

Eaton Axle Gets More Quiet Buying

Quiet buying has been reported coming into Eaton Axle from interests who were quite prominent in the stock two years ago when it was one of the popular speculative issues. There has been no attempt to run up the shares, but the belief in some quarters is that the accumulation may be completed and will be reflected much later on when the general conditions have improved.

Many Rail Dividend Meetings Next Week

Number railroad dividend meetings scheduled for next week explains in part the absence of aggressive market activity in the carrier stocks. Failure of this section to respond to the publication of favorable reports of increased freight rates was attributed to the uncertainty which weighs on dividend outlook in many instances.

Market Entering Quieter Period

Falling off in share activity was particularly construed as marking the inauguration of a quieter period in stock market. With the market in its present suspended condition, forecasting any definite growth or ability to form definite conclusions as to the immediate price trend.

STOCKS LOWER IN WALL ST. DEALINGS

New York, June 18—Share leaders moved lower in Wall Street dealings today. Price declines were accelerated near the close.

Trading was a low peace most of the session. It was only the volume of late transactions that carried the day's total above the million mark. Total sales approximated 1,100,000 shares.

RAILS DO BETTER

Steady trickle of discouraged liquidation which has come into the market since the early June upturn petered out finally and prompted fresh bear efforts. These came at a time when several observers were becoming impressed with the market's ability to stand almost still in the face of depressing news.

Rail shares stood up somewhat better than yesterday. St. Louis Southwestern sold up 3, then lost nearly half its gain, while Southern Pacific lost 2. Losses of a point or so appeared in New York Central and Pennsylvania.

Considerable selling was directed against the utilities in the late dealings, and losses ranged to 2 points. Losses appeared in American & Foreign Power, American Telephone, American Power & Light, and Consolidated Gas.

Losses of a point or so were recorded by U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, North American, Chrysler, Sears, du Pont and others.

The rail shares were steadier as the effects of the gloomy picture presented by the freight car situation wore off. Wall st. forecasters were inclined to the belief that some relief would be granted the divergent trends of southern Pacific and Cotton Belt reflected the exchange offer made to Cotton Belt minority stockholders

I. C. C. EXAMINER DOUBTED

While the offer of 3 Southern Pacific common shares for 5 Cotton Belt preferred, and 1 Southern Pacific for 3 Cotton Belt common, is equivalent to only around one-third of the price suggested by the Interstate Commerce Commission's examiner, the market action of the stocks has indicated that there had been little hope of a price anywhere near that suggested by the Examiner.

The cotton belt situation still depends upon acceptance by a majority stockholders of the offer, and approval by the commission so the problem presented by the fact that the carrier has not been earning its fixed charges, and has nearly $10,000,000 of financing to take care of during the next year, is still unsettled.

One problem of railroad financing, however—that of the Frisco—has been definitely disposed, by the purchase of $10,000,000 in five-year bonds by bankers. The fact that no public offering of the bonds will be attempted indicates the difficulties of such financing at the present time.

Three Meetings of Directors Put Off

Meeting of directors of International Paper & Power Corp scheduled for June 17 was postponed until June 24. Meeting of directors of New York Air Brake Co for dividend action, was postponed until June 24 due to the lack of a quorum. Meeting of stockholders of International Utilities Corp, to vote on reclassification of stock has been postponed until June 24 because of lack of a quorum.

Ohio Supreme Court Changes Its Mind

New York, June 18—Ohio Supreme Court has reversed its previous decision with respect to Allen County sewer bond case. Court previously held county commissioners cannot lawfully issue bonds on county as whole in anticipation of collection of special assessments from special district. Latest decision legalizes issuance of more than $210,000,000 in municipal and county improvement bonds.

Price of Export Copper Is Lowered

New York, June 18—The export copper price has been reduced to 8¼-cent a pound to 8.275 cents. Practically no copper is changing hands here and abroad. Fixed hands are offering at eight cents delivered, and fabricators are offering copper and brass products at the equivalent of that price for copper.

Universal Pipe Pays Foundry Coupon

Protective committee, headed by Frederick C. Leary, chairman, announces to holders of the Central Foundry Company first mortgage 6 per cent, sinking fund gold bonds that it has arranged with the Universal Pipe & Radiator Company for the latter to pay to the committee the amount of the coupons which matured May 1, 1931.

HARVARD CREW SLIGHT FAVORITE TO BEAT YALE

FANNING

By GEORGE UNDERWOOD

Training's a Bore. ↑ Lacey and Brady.
The Gloom Chasers. Hymie, Irish Bard.
Pugs All Have 'Em. ↓ Jimmy and Harry.

They Wanted Some Laughs Up in Heaven

No matter how appetizing and well-cooked a meal a chef puts on the table, no matter how scientific a diet an athlete follows, he will not benefit unless in the right frame of mind. Digestion is affected by mental condition, environment and many other things. Most athletes are temperamental, high strung. Training very often becomes a bore. Keeping a boxer in the right mood and spirits is a big problem. That is why it always is a good thing to have a camp buffoon around, a camp comedian—an entertainer of any kind. A good laugh at the right time has prevented many an athlete from "going over the hill" which is pugilistic argot for going stale. Many a fight really has been won by the camp comedian.

"Over the hill" is an apt expression. The training object is to bring an athlete to the peak of his condition. Let him go past the peak and he is "over the hill," or stale.

Many trainers are good entertainers. Take Al Lacey, for instance, Jack Sharkey's trainer. He is a great story-teller, a natural-born humorist as well as a philosopher and a good judge of human nature. Sharkey is one of the most temperamental athletes we ever have seen. But Lacey understands him like a book. Besides being a raconteur, Lacey sings. He not only sings Irish songs but Jewish songs, and he sings Jewish songs in a way that brings the laugh from the Yiddish boys as well as the other.

Then there's Hymie Caplan, former manager of Al Singer, former world's lightweight champion. Hymie is a Jewish boy born and raised on New York's great East Side. But Hymie's specialty is Irish songs. Hymie used to sit on the porch evenings at Archie Slatoff and Dave Halpern's kosher place at the Delaware Water Gap warbling Irish come-all-ye's to keep Singer from getting the blues. You should hear Hymie in his County Jerusalem brogue singing:

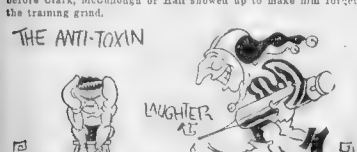
"In the A. M. we met at Killarney,
We crossed the lake in a boat,
An' I labored him all my shillelah,
For he trod on the tail o' me coat!

Another warbler of Irish songs is big, fat rolly polly Jack Brady, Tommy Loughran's trainer. Jack had to sing to work. When rubbing Loughran down he used to rub in time to Irish reels and jigs. When singing a come-all-ye Jack would wind up each chorus with a high agonized "O-h-h-h-h," and a resounding whack on Tommy's buttocks. Those whacks often would make Loughran howl in utter disharmony to Brady's John McCormack tenor. Jack would warble the plaint of the Irish colleen

"What do I care for your ships in the ocean,
What do I care for your house and land,
What do I care for your pounds and sixpence
All I want is a nice young man—O-h-h-h-h-h!

Down would come Jackie's big calloused hand in a resounding whack and loud would rise Tommy's agonized wail. "Ture" Duncan, the vaudeville performer, is a great friend of Loughran's and whenever Tommy was in training for an important "go" Duncan always found a way to drop in and stay the last two weeks at Tommy's training quarters.

Bobby Clark and Paul McCullough of the inimitable vaudeville team have helped Jack Sharkey through many a training grind. Paul is a native of Brookline and a great friend of Jack's. So is Bob Hall, the comedian. Sharkey often would chafe for days before Clark, McCullough or Hall showed up to make him forget the training grind.



Jack Dempsey always had faithful Jerry Luvardis—Jerry the Greek—or Bull Montana, the wrestling comedian, around to act as a buffer and let Dempsey engage in as much rough horse play as he wanted. Dempsey had legions of friends in the theatrical profession. The greatest "show" we ever saw was given by the late Jimmy Hussey and Harry Rosenthal one evening at Tom Luther's when Dempsey was in training. Never on the stage did Jimmy Hussey or Harry Rosenthal perform like they did that night over the brown mugs of ale at Luther's. Our sides feel sore again, thinking of them. Dempsey stayed up until the wee sma' hours—and it did him good!

It did all of us good. Did you ever stop and think how much good, how much sunshine the boys and girls of the theatrical profession bring into the world? There's no panacea like a good laugh. God be good to those who make us laugh!

Hughie—Good little Jimmie Hussey, soother of aching hearts and chaser of the blues is gone, now. He's up there making the good St. Peter split his sides. The good God saw fit to leave Harry Rosenthal with us to carry on for Jimmy. We thank Him for that.

They wanted some laughs in Heaven, Jimmy—
That's why they took you away.
No one we miss more than you, Jimmy—
What's that in our eye, a tear?
Yet God in His wisdom was good, Jimmy,

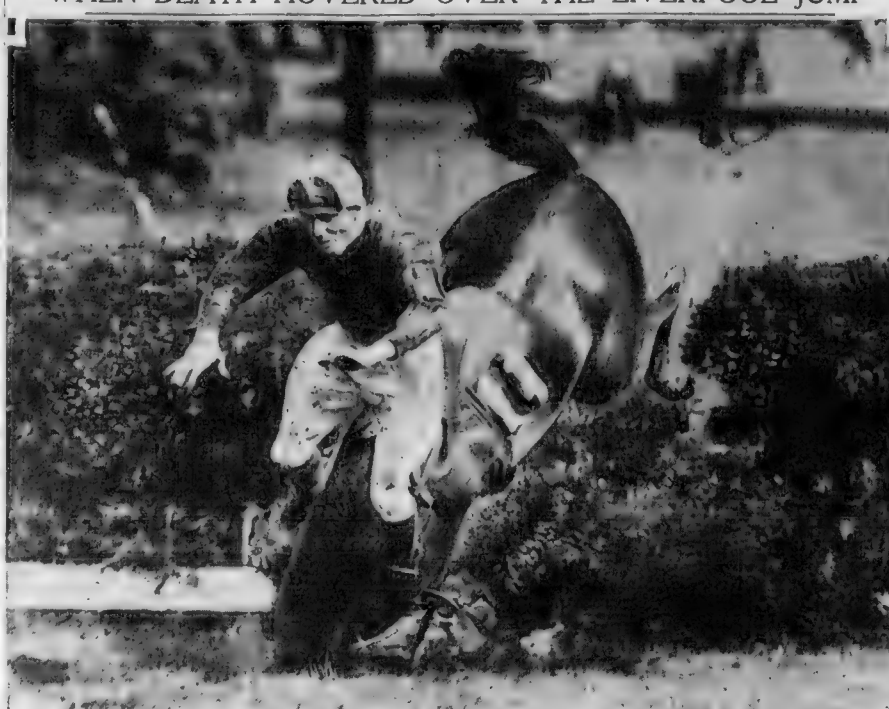
WHEN DEATH HOVERED OVER THE LIVERPOOL JUMP



Death with his grim scythe hovered over the Liverpool in the fifth race at The Country Club yesterday, when the horse, Rags Anderson, broke his neck as he attempted to clear the big jump and his rider, J. R. Simpson, was miraculously saved from death by a remarkable display of cool nerve, quick thinking and superb horsemanship. Here you see Simpson leaping in the air to one side just his his mount is striking the ground. The instant Simpson landed he lurched to one side and rolled into safety, escaping the steel-shod hoofs of the following field. Despite Simpson's nerve and daring he would have been killed or seriously injured except for equally quick thinking and nerve of riders on the other horses, who, despite the jumble at the jump, handled their mounts so Simpson was not ridden on. Simpson's mount, Rags Anderson, landed in such a position that his neck was broken. He died shortly after.

Jumper Killed in Race at Brookline Course

BRAVES BEGIN SUPREME BID FOR FIRST PLACE

M'KECHNIE IN OPTIMISTIC MOOD

By JOE CASHMAN

Bill McKechnie's battling Braves, rated by the writer more than a month ago as the most improved club in either major league, and now so regarded by experts everywhere, come home today to make a supreme bid to reach the top during a 30-game stay at the Wigwam.

The schedule affords the Tribe, now in fourth place and eight games under the roof, an opportunity to jump into the thick of the National League pennant struggle before the week is over as, starting this afternoon, it will play six games in four days with the pace-setting and champion St. Louis Cardinals.

Following the Cards will come, in the order named, the Reds for four games in three days, the Cubs for five games in four days, the Pirates for four games in as many days, the Phillies for four games in two days, the Giants for three games in two days and the Robins for four games in as many days.

The edge in the engagement with the Cards would lift the Warriors to within at least six games of first place and instill in them a spirit of confidence which would be sure to make them mighty hard to stop.

Braves Have Good Chance to Beat Cards

And, judging from their showing in St. Louis last week, when they captured three out of four from the champions, the natives would seem to stand an even chance of taking at least four out of six from the Streetmen.

Manager Bill McKechnie, who never brags or says anything he doesn't mean, talked of the future most optimistically upon his arrival in town this morning.

"The critics," he declared "predicted at the start of the season that the Braves didn't have a chance of getting out of the second division. We have made them alter that opinion by remaining in the first division since the race began.

"Now they say that we have a pretty good chance of finishing fourth, but that we can't possibly climb any higher.

"Have we a chance to win? Of course we have. Any club within eight games of the top with only one-third of the season completed is a pennant contender. Why, only a few years ago the Giants overcame a seven-game lead to win the flag in the last six weeks of the campaign.

McKechnie Has No Fear of Rivals

"We have taken three out of four from the Cards and three out of five from the Cubs thus far. There is no reason why we should fear either of those rivals. We haven't done so well against the Giants, but there is plenty of time to make up the ground we have lost to them and I'm confident we will do so before the finish.

"We have played good ball up to now, if we can and, I believe, will do better from here in. Up to a short while ago, I had only three winning pitchers, Brandt, Zachary and Selhod. Now I have five, judging from the fine performances turned in by Frankhouse and Sherdel in recent starts. That means a lot.

"Mind you, I'm not predicting that we'll finish on top. That would be silly of any manager at this early stage of the race. I'm merely pointing out that we are in the running, very much in it.

"And, if we are fortunate enough to escape any more injuries, I think we will convince the world of this fact before the end of our long home stay."

BRITISH TEAM OPPOSED TO NEW BALL

By BILL GRIMES

Without an exception, the British Ryder Cup players, who are to pair with 10 amateurs in four ball medal play exhibition at the Winchester Country Club tomorrow afternoon, are bitterly opposed to the larger ball.

"Increasing the size of the present standard American ball from 1.62 to 1.68 inches was a killing blow to the general run of golfers," was the statement of George Duncan, who voiced the opinion of his team mates.

"The present ball which you are using in the 'States' is far too large to be controlled by the men of the street," continued the former British pro champion.

"If the United States Golf Association was so anxious to preserve the present golf courses, only one change was necessary, the lightening of the old ball. By adopting a ball measuring 1.62 inches and weighing either 1.59 or 1.60 ounces, the average golfers' games would have benefitted."

New Ball Is Too Large

"Back in 1919, I tried to get the Royal and Ancient Golf Association to adopt a lighter ball. At that time, the boys were beginning to make many of our courses at home look foolish. I realized that if some weight was taken from the ball, it would be impossible to get the distance and, although the R. & A. thought the idea feasible, they held to the old ball.

"I venture to say that if we had been using the American ball during the recent British open championship, no player in the field would have bettered 300.

"Tommie Armour won the title with 296, and I figure that the larger and lighter ball would have been at least three strokes more per round.

"There is too much hitting surface on the larger ball for the ordinary golfer. As far as I am personally concerned, if the other professionals use your ball, I am willing to take my chances. It is on the putting greens that we experienced the most trouble with your ball.

"You know, we played four matches this year with the larger and lighter ball. At St. Anne's in February, where we first tried out your ball, we had a terrible time. The day was cold and the wind strong. And naturally, the greens were not at their best. Against such odds, we did not have a chance.

Lighter Ball of Old Size Would Be Ideal

"To my way of thinking, only on the rarest of occasions do you meet with greens which favor the U. S. ball. If the putting surfaces were all like Oakmont was the last time I played there in the U. S. open, it would be possible to putt successfully, but unfortunately, there are only a very few Oakmonts.

"I am absolutely opposed to a larger ball. But as I said previously, your old size ball weighing 1.59 or 1.60 ounces would be an ideal combination. We must all get together and play a universally standard ball. The game is gaining in popularity throughout Europe and South America and the next open championships such as the United States and British are developing into international championships, but if each country is going to have its own ball, the advancement of their championship will be retarded."

The British Ryder Cup team arrived here last night and are registered at the Hotel Lenox. The team is in charge of Manager J. C. Pigeon and will have its first work out in this country today.

Bobby Jones May Play at Worcester

Upon learning that there was a possibility that Bobby Jones would play with them at Winchester, the Britons were delighted. Bobby is very popular with English golfers, both the professionals and the amateurs. And, as the proceeds from the exhibition this afternoon will be donated to the Ryder Cup team, Bobby Jones will be on hand if possible. Bobby would do anything in his power to aid the British professionals and his presence at Winchester would be a ten strike.

As usual, the British Ryder Cup team will come with the U. S. Customs. The Customs demanded a heavy duty on the Ryder Cup, and whether or not it came to the carpet for about an hour trying to convince the authorities that the Ryder Cup was an international trophy, which was making its second entrance into this country.

The Ryder Cup players will leave from the exhibition tomorrow after-for Columbus tomorrow night, if the weather man is kind to them and offers some good weather. Otherwise, the exhibition will be played on Saturday.

Through the courtesy of the Publix Theatres the British have been invited to attend a preview of the Bobby Jones pictures today at the Olympia Theater.

MATE FAVORED TO WIN DERBY

Chicago, June 18 (AP)—Spanish Play, from the stable of Morris and Knebelkamp, will be the West's chief hope Saturday in the $50,000 American Derby at Washington Park, most open of the season's three-year-old races.

Sweep All, Charles T. Fisher's crack colt, was withdrawn yesterday after bowing a teadon in the Derby trial Tuesday, removing the West's outstanding entrant. Sweep All finished second to Twenty Grand in the Kentucky Derby, and his work in recent Washington Park races stamped him as a big possibility, with Mrs. Whitney's champion out of the event.

Spanish Play won the Louisiana Derby and took fourth money in the Kentucky Derby. He finished third in the Derby trial, which was won by Boys Howdy.

Mate, A. C. Bostwick's winner of the Preakness, probably will go to the post the favorite. Sun Meadow, which ran second to Twenty Grand in the Belmont Stake Saturday and finished ahead of Jamestown, is regarded as a certain starter and will have backing.

Others regarded as certain to go to the post are Ladder, Lightning Bolt, Boys Howdy, Knights Call, Oswego, Morpheus and Pittsburgher. Possibilities are No More, Don Leon, Up, Joey Bibb, Sunny Lassie, Scotland's Glory, Abdel and Prince d'Amour.

GOOD GOLF

By CHESTER HORTON
"Golf's Greatest Teacher"

You can see at a glance that if your swing is so made that the club keeps on a line with the plane line shown in the sketch, your head, your shoulders, your body and the ball stay in correct relationship to one another. That is the accomplishment you really seek in your efforts to project the ball agreeably, though you perhaps think mostly about hitting the ball. Keep your swing to this order and hitting the ball will take care of itself. In the sketch the outcome of an effort at flat swinging is shown, with the club underneath the plane line in the back swing. In this swing there has been too much body turning and not enough upward elevation of the right arm as can be seen. This swinging fault, while not great, is enough to cause unsatisfactory flight.

Leach to Rest Up

Diamond Dust

The Red Sox are en route today to Detroit, where on the morrow they will open their second Western trip of the season. They will visit every town in the circuit before returning to the Fens on July 12.

The weather man has handed Bob Quinn many hard blows this season but none more severe than the holiday rain which forced the postponement of the scheduled doubleheader between the Sox and New York Yankees. The showers, which ceased shortly after the tilts had been cancelled, washed at least $25,000 out of the hands of the Fenway "prexy."

It can't rain forever, though, and if the Sox can remain within hailing distance of the first division until they return home, Quinn will get back with interest all the money inclement weather has cost him.

with them today. The Browns, who threatened to snap the string at the 10-game mark, tried hard again yesterday, but failed in the ninth when the Solons scored a run to break a 7-to-7 tie.

The Athletics retained their 2½-game lead over the Capital entry, by defeating Cleveland, 4 to 2, on Saturday afternoon.

The Macks and Senators have lost only three games to Western opponents all season. The A's didn't drop a contest on their first swing around the wide open spaces, but the White Sox, Browns and Indians each won a verdict in Quakertown. The Solons lost two decisions to the Westerners on the road and only one at home.

The Phillies will be in a bad way if "Buns" Arlett, slugging outfielder, obeys a summons to appear in court in Oakland, Cal., next month to testify in an automobile case. He would be out of the lineup for two weeks or more, if he should make the trip.

Fred Hoey Day and a double-header between the Braves and champion St. Louis Cardinals should attract Boston's biggest baseball crowd ever to Braves Field on tomorrow afternoon.

Special Dash for Schoolboy Runners

A special 100-yard title race for schoolboys will be one of the features of the Cambridge Scottish Clan games at Russell Field on Saturday afternoon. Among the entries are those of Carl Johnson and C. Ryan of Mechanic Arts; B. E. Albright, J. F. Lucas, M. Mansell, J. J. Burgess and J. Sheridan of Trade; G. Kennedy, D. Kiley and F. H. Brennan of Rindge and McKee, Carrol and Committeo. There will also be a special school relay. Everett, Medford and Rindge having already entered.

Tom Connolly Is Done After 36 Years

DEGLANE DEFENDS HIS MAT TITLE AT ARENA

CHAMP MEETS MALCEWICZ TONIGHT

Jack Conway Picks DeGlane, George to Win Bouts

Jack Conway today picked Henri DeGlane to win from Joe Malcewicz and Ed Don George to defeat Howard Cantonwine in the wrestling show at the Arena tonight.

"I got a peek at DeGlane in his final workout," said Jack, "and I believe he is right for tonight's tussle with Malcewicz. The Panther has won 24 bouts in a row and is certain to give the champion the battle of his life.

W.	L.	Pct.

By JACK CONWAY

Malcewicz has won 24 bouts in a row and is the opinion he will add the world's title to his list of trophies this evening.

Jack Conway

This Panther scored 23 of his wins on the Pacific Coast and in the Northwest. He returned to Boston last week and tossed Howard Cantonwine twice inside of 23 minutes.

Malcewicz has been up around the championship throne for several years, but the breaks of the game have prevented him from becoming title holder.

Joe was matched to wrestle Lewis for the title in Los Angeles when the latter was beaten by DeGlane in Montreal. The Panther then hurried East and went on the trail of the Frendsman. Paul Bowser, always an admirer of Malcewicz, was successful in making the match.

DeGlane was held to a draw by Ed George at Buffalo on Monday night. Each had scored a fall when the tussle was halted by the 11 o'clock rule which exists in New York State.

George and Cantonwine in the Semifinal

George will appear in the semifinal against Howard Cantonwine. George will try to do better against the Iowa Thunderbolt than Malcewicz did. George is in a tough spot in view of the fact the Panther tossed Cantonwine twice within 23 minutes.

Matchmaker Alex MacLean of the Crescup-Pinhon Post will make an effort to sign George with the victor of the Malcewicz-DeGlane bout at a show he plans to stage at Braves Field on July 4.

Bonnie Muir, Australian heavyweight, will test out Bibber McCoy.

PACHYDERMS, BOTH OF 'EM

Mat Champion Gives Girls Beauty Hints

By HENRI DeGLANE
(As Told to Jack Conway)

"Your French girls are so slim and petite. Please tell us their secret for keeping down their weight."

An American woman was the speaker. She was just past 30 and beginning to pack on weight. And she was so discouraged. Poor thing! I really pitied her.

I think some very beautiful American ladies would rather be told they are going to lose their husbands than to be informed they are getting heavy.

French girls are noted for their slim, stylish bodies. And yet they don't shorten their lives by keeping down weight. This is because they know how to exercise properly.

The average American woman who is not obliged to work for a living either does not do any exercise or does too much. When one exercises too much, one packs on weight, especially if one takes any layoffs.

Coached Nobility

My diploma from Ecole Normale Joinville le Port, famous French military school, gave me the right to teach physical culture.

The nobility of France is much interested in keeping in physical condition. I used to condition Count de Castellino and Count de Segur. They realized that good health is the key to happiness.

The ladies, too, were anxious to keep in splendid physical condition. Exercise kept down their weight, also tended to make them more vivacious. When a lady is in good health, her eyes sparkle, while there is more enthusiasm in her conversation. She becomes radiant, and, they do say, very attractive to the man she loves most.

Mademoiselle Davelli and Mademoiselle Chanel were numbered among those who took lessons in physical culture from me. They would go through their exercises each morning before they started the day's work.

Suzanne Exception

Mademoiselle Chanel is the famous French dressmaker who gets as high as $2000 for a single dress. Of course her dresses are silks. That is why she gets such high prices for her distinctive efforts.

The average French girl does not go in for outdoor athletics as much as they do in America. Of course we have Mademoiselle Susanne Lenglen, famous tennis player, but she is rather an exception to the general rule.

I'll admit she is a very beautiful girl. So are many more of your American girl tennis players, golfers and swimmers. They are beautiful despite the toll of competition.

I believe the American girls would be more healthy if they exercised moderately.

Of course they could not be much more beautiful than they are now, for are they not near perfect in this respect?

Maybe when I retire from the wrestling game and get married some American girl will pay me the compliment of becoming my wife. Oh, yes. I'm going to get married some time, but not while I'm wrestling sing.

I shall follow Gene Tunney's system. I shall conquer all-comers, then retire and settle down.

(In tomorrow's Boston Evening American, DeGlane will tell how he decided to become a professional wrestler and of his tour of Europe, in which he defeated all-comers.)

FRENCH AND M'DONALD LEAD FIELD

Miami Valley Club, Dayton, O., June 18 (AP)—With about two thirds of the field, including all the chief contenders yet to be heard from, Bob MacDonald of Chicago, and Emmett French of Youngstown, O., led in the fight for the Western open golf championship today with equal cards of 72, one over par.

Richard Chapman, the interscholastic champion, had a narrow escape in one of the extra hole matches, defeating George Appel, Jr., of Upper Montclair, N. J., captain of the Brown University golf team, one up in 20 holes.

A. F. Kammer, Jr., of Baltusrol, son of a former New Jersey champion, and a freshman at Princeton, also had an easy time with C. H. Mayo, Jr., of Lenox Hills, whom he defeated, 6 and 5.

What the Stars Did

By the Associated Press.

Ossie Bluege, Senators—His triple in ninth inning drove in winning run for 8-7 victory over Browns.

George Earnshaw, Athletics—Held Cleveland to five hits and cracked out single and double to score 11th straight victory.

Wally Gilbert Robins—Hit double and two singles and scored one run in 5-0 victory over Pirates.

MACK LINES UP FIGHT CARD

By RINGSIDE

Matchmaker Eddie Mack of the Argonne A. A. today completed his card for his show at Braves Field on next Monday night. It will feature George Nichols, Buffalo heavyweight, against George Courtney of Oklahoma in a 10-round bout.

Primo Carnera, who belted Pat Redmond out of the picture in a round, will box three two-round exhibitions. Big Boy Rawson, Big Boy Burlap and Danny Reagan of Gardner will furnish the opposition for Carnera.

Mack has signed four six-rounders and three four-round contests.

Baby Jack Renault of Cambridge, who was going on high until he bumped into Steve Hialiko, will oppose Darcy White of New Bedford. White is one of the most promising lightweights in New England.

Jose Diaz, Cuban lightweight, has been matched with Tommy Rawson, Jr. of East Boston, while Spec Friend of Oklahoma will tackle Paddy Creedon of Australia. Creedon is a nephew of Dan Creedon, old-time heavyweight who created trouble with Bob Fitzsimmons.

Gardner Thomas of Revere will box four rounds with Coke Mason of Revere. Thomas is a son of the late Joe Thomas, famous middleweight who battled Billy Papke.

CHOIR SINGER IS FOUND SLAIN

He nodded sympathetically.

"That's pretty tough. Well, maybe this case will be cleared up in a hurry—we'll soon know."

On Broome st., under the porte-cochere, the car of the commissioner was waiting, its engine already purring and ready to race. At the wheel sat that impassive and platter-faced Neil McMahon, Colt's chauffeur and our fearless companion on many a strange case.

With his usual taciturnity, Colt did not address me throughout our reckless journey. Soon we were in the neighborhood of Bellevue Hospital and the Morgue and on the pier. A policeman saluted.

"Sergt. Carter, Mr. Commissioner."

THE DETAILED STORY

"Well, on or about half an hour ago, a young fellow named Twistle was taking his girl, Bella Bloom, out for a ride in his motor boat. And they bumped into a row boat. The Bloom girl saw what was in the row boat and screamed and fainted. And Twistle got excited about the girl fainting, and he got more excited when he turned around and saw what was in the row boat."

At this juncture we were joined by another figure, a short, lithe police officer, who identified himself as Sergeant Sloan, of the Marine Division, in command of the patrol boat Gypsy.

"We had just gone on duty, sir—it's summer, and the schedules are a bit mixed up. We had left Pier A and took it easy coming up the East river. Everything was quiet and nice as you please. Then I heard a scream and I turned the wheel over to Officer Mintz while I turned my searchlight this way and that. Then I saw the two boats, just off Tudor City it was, and I figured it was a collision.

"When I got there I saw what I was up against—with two stiffs in a dingey and a girl fainted in the launch and the young fellow so scared his teeth were telegraphing. So I tied a rope to the row-boat and brought it in here. Sergt. Carter and Patrolman Harris happened to be on the dock at the time, and reported it in."

"Let me see the bodies," said Thatcher Colt, after lighting his pipe.

Sergt. Carter led us out to the end of the pier where Patrolman Harris, a limber-looking chap, gave a nimble, spry salute, and then reverted to a posture of stolid attention.

"Has Dr. Multooler arrived?" asked the commissioner.

"No one here yet, sir," replied Carter. "Will you step this way?"

Thatcher Colt leaned far out over the edge of the pier, looking downward. Then he drew his pocket electric torch and turned on its light. Without a word, he lowered himself to a horizontal beam that ran along the side of the pier—a ledge slippery from the spillings of the night before. I followed as quickly as I could, but already Colt was stooping, torch in hand.

The arc of his hand lamp fell brightly on a dreadful sight. Tied by a rope to a stanchion, a flat-bottomed rowboat, freshly painted green, swayed uneasily on the troubled waters. Lying on their backs in the bottom of this clumsy little craft were the bodies of a man and a woman.

One glance at those bodies told a frightful story. The man, short, and inclined to plumpness, seemed no more than 30. From his round and beardless face the open eyes stared up at us with a glittering reflection that gave them the semblance of life.

Through his broad and lofty forehead was a bullet hole, and the man's luxuriant brown curls were matted with the blood, which, flowing from the wound, had spattered over his face, dribbled on his clerical collar, and bedaubed his black ecclesiastical vest.

Besides him, as if in placid repose, and with no sign of suffering touching her lovely features, lay the woman. She was young and pretty. The thick bob of her yellow hair was caught with a fillet of blue ribbon.

I confess the passing of years does not release me from the lingering spell of horror which this midnight encounter fixed upon my memory. The sight of that pair still haunts my eyes, accustomed by war, reporting and police work to grisly scenes.

For a long time Thatcher Colt stared down in somber melancholy upon the rowboat and its strange cargo. I saw him reach out and touch the woman's hand. Then he spoke over his shoulder to the sergeant:

DISPLAY MEN HEAR MENCH

The annual banquet of the International Association of Display Men, now in convention in Boston, was held last night at the Hotel Bradford. About 500 members of the association were present.

John Mench

Prominent city and state officials, in addition to leading retail store experts, were among the guests. David A. Morey of the Morey Decorative Studios and president of the Boston Display Men's Club was toastmaster.

The principal speaker was John Mench, general merchandise and advertising counsellor of the Hearst publications. Mr. Mench, a recognized authority on problems of display and merchandise, discussed methods of operation for large retail concerns in these fields.

During the five-day meeting of the display men these experts were heard: Herman Frankenthal of B. Altman Co., New York, and Arthur Price, the Namm Store, Brooklyn.

The closing sessions today will include discussions to be led by the following display directors: H. C. Oehler, Chicago; Charles Vosburg, Baltimore; Carl V. Haecker, Chicago; Charles W. Morton, Sacramento, Cal.; L. L. Wilkins, Oklahoma City, Okla.; William Scharninghausen, Seattle, Wash.; J. H. Davenport, Ia., and John F. Harvey, Boston.

X-RAY

Examination, consultation and trial treatment absolutely free to all who call before June 21st. The wonderful power of the X-ray and mercury quartz light treatment is accomplishing wonders in diseases of every description. No matter what your disease may be, remember Daniel J. Walsh, M. D., fulfills the above offer.

STOMACH TROUBLE

Mr. Frank Tassone, 247 Marion St., E. Boston, says:—"I suffered from stomach trouble for nine years. I had headaches, bloating, dizziness, inability to retain my food. I had been treated by many doctors and hospitals who did not help me although I paid them large sums of money. I read of Dr. Walsh and what he was doing for suffering humanity. So I had him treat me. I took his treatment faithfully, now I feel good. I have sent friends who suffer as I did to Dr. Walsh, and I make this statement in the hope of helping others who need skilled medical aid." Signed Frank Tassone.

CITY OF BOSTON

Ordinances of 1931—Chapter Four

An Ordinance Prohibiting Certain Unnecessary Noises. Be it ordained by the City Council of Boston, as follows:

Section 1. No person owning or having the care, custody or possession of any musical instrument, radio set, phonograph, victrola or other machine or device for producing or reproducing sound shall operate or use or permit to be operated or used such machine or device in such manner as to disturb the peace and comfort of the neighboring inhabitants, or at any time with louder volume than is necessary for convenient hearing for the person or persons who are in the room or chamber in which such machine or device is operated and who are voluntary listeners thereto. The operation of any such machine or device between the hours of twelve o'clock midnight and seven o'clock A. M. in such a manner as to be plainly audible at a distance of one hundred feet from the building or structure in which it is located shall be prima facie evidence of a violation of this ordinance. Nothing herein contained shall be construed to prohibit playing by a band or orchestra in a hall, building or in the open air, but this exception shall not apply to a reproduction of such playing by any machine or device.

Section 2. Any person, firm or corporation violating the provisions of this ordinance shall be subject to a penalty not exceeding twenty dollars for each offense.

Work Is the Remedy

Federal Government Should Lead in Furnishing Employment

Work is the remedy for unemployment proposed by William Randolph Hearst—and it is an American remedy because work preserves self-respect.

"A gigantic appropriation by the Government," declared Mr. Hearst in his recent radio address on the causes and cure of the present depression, "not for a dole, but for the employment of a vast amount of labor at the prevailing rate of prosperity wages, would not only stabilize wages but would immediately set the machinery in motion for the restoration of prosperity."

His study of the depression had also led Wallace Brett Donham, dean of the Harvard Graduate School of Business Administration, to much the same conclusion arrived at by Mr. Hearst.

In his timely book entitled "Business Adrift," Dean Donham says:

"I see no way out of the conclusion that security for unemployment in times of emergency like this must be attained through work made available by the Government.

"Charity is not a sound answer. Insurance is wholly inept.

"The socially sound remedy for unemployment is work. "In times of depression, so far as private interests and the efficient management of business cannot, the Government should furnish work."

And this is precisely what the Federal Government would do if it possessed the COURAGE to act and the WISDOM to take the action advocated by MR. HEARST and float now a five billion dollar PROSPERITY LOAN to be expended on a national program of public works.

Faith to believe that unemployed Americans would spurn a dole if they could get a job is the faith that should quicken their head-servants in Washington today.

Faith on their part to believe that "Government is protection" as much for the unemployed as the employed would raise up a leadership that would meet the peace-time challenge of unemployment as courageously and effectively as the war-time challenge of a foreign foe has always been met by "government of the people, by the people, and for the people."

Dean Donham accurately diagnoses the ailment of American leadership in business and government when he declares that the failure of either to solve the problem of unemployment is due chiefly to "distrust of democracy."

To say that the Federal Government is not capable of formulating and carrying out a vast program of public works as an emergency relief measure is to challenge the fitness of the American people for self-government.

Let the President call the new Congress in extra session, lay before it the program of public works that he advocated as a candidate for President, and public sentiment will do the rest.

PUBLIC SENTIMENT WILL COMPEL THE CONGRESS TO APPROVE THAT PROGRAM.

And a five billion dollar prosperity loan will be quickly oversubscribed.

Now is the time to float a PROSPERITY LOAN that will furnish work to the unemployed, preserve their self-respect, restore their purchasing power, revive confidence and hasten the return of prosperity.

"WORK IS THE REMEDY FOR UNEMPLOYMENT."

And the duty of the Federal Government in this emergency is to lead the Government of the States and municipalities in furnishing work to the unemployed.

Must We Buy Peace?

Europe's Debts Should Not Be Cancelled

Against any scheme to purchase European disarmament by cancellation of Europe's war debts to the United States, Calvin Coolidge has reiterated as a private citizen the emphatic protest that he registered more than once as President.

Writing for the Seattle Post-Intelligencer and other newspapers, Mr. Coolidge confesses his inability to understand the suggestion "that we should pay foreign nations for doing them the favor of helping them reduce their armament costs."

This suggestion will find no favor with the American people. They know full well that there is no legitimate connection between cancellation of Europe's war debts to this country and co-operation by Europe with this country in the reduction of armaments.

Germany has kept her part of that agreement. The other European nations have not kept theirs.

Having refused to ratify the Versailles Treaty, the United States is under no obligation to undertake the enforcement of that engagement.

Having refused to ratify the Versailles Treaty, the United States is not called upon to meddle in any European quarrel arising between the European nations which are parties to that engagement.

Having refused to ratify the Versailles Treaty, the United States should refuse to be dragged into any Conference, Court or League involving the Versailles Treaty.

In denouncing this latest attempt of the European debtors of the United States to trick this country into paying them to disarm by cancelling their debts, Calvin Coolidge spoke the firm resolve of the American people.

His ultimatum in this matter should be made the official ultimatum of his successor in the White House and transmitted to Europe by President Hoover's Secretary of State.

The sooner such an ultimatum is delivered officially to all the signatories of the Versailles Treaty, the sooner Europe will know that the American people are not the simpletons in foreign relations that some European politicians seem to regard them.

WHAT DO YOU KNOW?

Match correctly:

What is a one-hundred-billion-dollar bouquet, the annual income of this dear little girl, if you LACK LOVE?

Of what use is a bridal veil, a bridal dress and bridal high heels, if there is no BRIDEGROOM?

Why Can't You Get Along With People?

WHY CAN'T you get along with people? Why do they get your goat?

"I'd get along with them all right," you say, "if they'd act decently. But they don't. They're lazy and silly and dishonest and mean and conceited. That's why I can't get along with them."

No, it isn't, stranger. People might possess all these disagreeable qualities and you could still get along with them if . . .

Elsie Robinson

YOU KNEW HOW TO GET ALONG WITH YOURSELF.

Actually, it isn't the cussedness in the other fellow that bothers you.

IT IS THE WEAKNESS IN YOURSELF . . . IT IS YOUR OWN ANGER AND FEAR AND ENVY AND COWARDICE AND CONCEIT THAT DEMORALIZE YOU.

The world is full of mean people. You can't help that. But you CAN help your own reaction to those mean people. You CAN control the qualities within yourself that give meanness power over you. How?

BY USING YOUR HEAD INSTEAD OF YOUR EMOTIONS.

There's Smith, for instance. You dislike Smith intensely. Every time you meet him he rubs you the wrong way. After you leave him, your day is spoiled. You keep thinking of that smarty smile of his, that sneaky look. The more you think, the madder you get. As a consequence, you forget to keep that important appointment. You bungle your letters. You snap at everyone you meet. In short, you run amuck. Whose fault is it? You think it is Smith's fault. You think that Smith's cussedness has caused this riot. You're wrong—it's your own fault. We'll grant that Smith is cussed, but your own lack of self-control caused the riot.

You can't help meeting Smith. But you can help meeting him EMOTIONALLY . . . with your toes dread and your fangs bared. Meet Smith with your MIND . . . with your cool, controlled mind. THINK about him . . . Instead of FEELING about him. Size him up—quietly, deliberately. Don't begin to rave within yourself because he's a crook and coward. Accept those facts without emotion . . . just as you'd accept the fact of a cockroach, or a tiresome noise, or a disgusting odor.

You don't go up in the air when you meet a cockroach. You can THINK about cockroaches without FEELING about them. Don't go up in the air when you meet a Smith. THINK about him—but keep your FEELINGS in cold storage. Smith's a pest. But that's HIS bad luck—it needn't be yours. Decide how you will deal with this pest. Then act on that decision. You may have to act very drastically . . . but you DON'T have to get hot 'n' bothered. Use your head instead of your heart in handling Smith. THINK . . . ACT . . . BUT DON'T EMOTE.

For the minute you begin to emote you're cooked. You have then something much worse than Smith's cussedness to deal with . . . you have your own anger and fear. Smith's cussedness is OUTSIDE you. But your own anger and fear are INSIDE you, and you're licked if they once get control.

Smith may do many things to your OUTSIDE life, but he can't do anything to your INSIDE life, unless you let him. No matter how bad the breaks, as long as you can CONTROL YOURSELF you hold all the aces.

It isn't possible to LIKE everybody.

BUT YOU'RE A FOOL IF YOU DISLIKE THEM. For DISLIKE does worse things to you than the other fellow can possibly do.

New York Day by Day

Gangland of Rats on Rikers Island

NEW YORK, June 18—Rats on Rikers Island have attained the menace of millions. It swarms with them. Rikers is a miasmatic wasteland where metropolitan garbage is dumped and burned. The brooding area is cooling day and night with a fog of acrid smoke.

The caretaker and assistants go armed with heavy clubs to beat off fiercely savage rodents. Employes sleep in berths poised on steel stanchions that rats cannot reach. It is no fantasy that rats are as big as dachshunds—bloated, shady-eyed and quite horrible.

Garbage scows with daily loads of the city's offal bring a new supply of rats constantly. Their propagation is a matter of higher arithmetic. Rabbits, in comparison, are race suicidists. Dogs brought to battle on Rikers have been routed.

Poison and other measures are emptying the ocean with a sieve. So long as the rats keep to the island the danger is small, but scientists declare they are able to swim to land or ride bobbing driftwood ashore as a lumber jack foots a whirling log.

Rats organize like gangs. They send out scouts and when fertile fields are found they move in the manner of an army—and always under the cover of night. No city in the world is honeycombed with so many tunnels and other means of rapid rat transit.

An idea of the number is gained by statistics. There are approximately 15,000,000 on Manhattan Island. A rat and his wife will have 800 children a year. Left to their depredations, the New York army can cause a destructive loss amounting to $2,000,000 annually.

It is now urged the city hold a Rat Killing Day yearly. This was done in Milan in 1928 and more than a million were destroyed. While no section is immune, the majority of rats hold forth around the wharves along the water fronts.

* * *

Every Saturday night in our town stray dogs gathered about the flour mill for the weekly rat killing. Mill workers carried clubs and wore big cycle pants guards to keep the rats from running up their legs. Rats were released from wire cages and the town was a bedlam of shrieks, barks and squeals for an hour.

A certain Hollywood movie director could never hope to win a beauty prize. In a New York cafe the other day he observed rather pathetically: "My job permits me to be near and friendly with beautiful women. In any other work they would ignore me."

* * *

Most of us who write have those exaggerated moments of megrim when we consider ourselves baffled idealists bufleting realities. Everything's wrong and life's a cruel twist. Negroes call it "the blues." At the time we do not believe the world has a potion that can medicine us to happiness again. The most pronounced fit of depression I ever experienced was motoring in England 14 years ago. We stopped at a wayside inn on a bleak stretch of the Kentish coast. An American cable, forwarded from London, awaited us. It was a discouraging verdict concerning a literary effort to which I had given time and thought. This message, together with the clinging clamminess of a heavy fog and a gripping nostalgia, brought rather vaguely the only thought I ever had of self-destruction.

* * *

And my reason for recalling it is that there was a he-Niobe here a while ago dripping with similar gloom. A play, tentatively accepted, was rejected. He had moved into an expensive apartment on the strength of the windfall. He croaked: "My only out is the river." I tried to perk him up but he left bloated with self pity. Fourteen years ago I could not only have matched him with self-pity but tossed in a couple of good crys and a long moan to boot. And now look—not only all merry and bright but plumb full of the Old Nedl.

Bucked up by the many-splendored Broadway dazzle, Verne Porter and I sought a rgy of romance last evening in a quarter-a-dance hall near 50th street. My partner for a trip or what-have-you of the light fantastic was a bright blond, obviously fatigued but carrying on. "You remind me," she finally said, "of a fellow I used to go out with." And before she could retrieve it, added: "Cept he could dance."

Just Folks

Pleasure

I don't know just how to measure
Rightly what is known as pleasure.
Some men find it at the races
Some go fishing; some go straying
Where at games mankind is playing.
As for me I'm quite delighted
When a budding plant I've sighted.

Round the garden plot I'm grooming,
Marigold and poppies blooming
With a sense of triumph fill me.
Zinnias have the power to thrill me.
I discover cause for sighing
If I think a tree is dying,
And there's something in an aster
That can make my pulse beat faster.

Some like joys that only bore me,
In this world of endless choices
Something every man rejoices,
And I care not what my neighbor
Takes to soothe him from his labor.
All I say is I can chuckle
Over budding honeysuckle.

'Finest Bath in World'

New L Street Accommodates 3500 at One Time

CROWD AT DOORS OF NEW L STREET BATH

It has been erected at a cost of $400,000. It will accommodate some 3500 bathers at one time.

The L Street bath is a magnificent institution. It brings together the people of all stratas of life where they can in common enjoy the healthful sport without any of the superficial distinctions of classes.

Bathing and the outdoor recreations there are responsible for the prolonged life and the subsequent usefulness of men who otherwise would have "passed ere their time." A city that caters to the health and satisfactory recreation of its people can perform no more beneficial function.

L Street is an institution to Boston, of current fame similar to The Common and Bunker Hill Monument. The people who are accustomed to use it are deserving of "the finest bathhouse in the world." They are a fine lot.

The Dollar Is Up

Buy While It Stays Up

The dollar is up, prices are down.

Read the advertisements, pick the bargains, buy now.

The dollar is up. It is worth fifteen cents more, in purchasing power, than it was two years ago, and thirty-two cents more than ten years ago.

You can buy more with it today than you could at any other time since the war.

If you want an inside picture of what has happened to prices, and what up-to-date stores are doing about it, read this from the president of one of the best-known department stores in New York City:

"To stimulate buying on the part of the group who have been but little affected by the depression, we proposed recently to attempt to present to the consuming public—both in publicity and merchandise—convincing arguments that this is an advantageous time to buy.

"We had been watching the continuous increases in savings bank deposits, particularly in this State, where they have attained a peak never before reached—$5,000,000,000. And we felt sure there was a tremendous buying capacity that could be made effective. These increases indicated the extent to which the public is hoarding money instead of investing it in the normal way.

"In our publicity WE STRESSED THE DRAMATIC DROP IN PRICES, and in our merchandise WE SUPPLIED PROOFS OF THE FACT."

As a result of these low prices, the number of items sold in that store last week was forty-two per cent greater than in the corresponding week of 1930, and the net profits increased.

The response to low prices, in all stores which have announced them, has been instantaneous.

American housewives, knowing values, know that greater values have not been offered in years than are being offered in many places now.

They know the dollar is bigger. They know, studying the advertisements, where the bargains are to be picked up. And they are picking them up. They are putting their dollars to work again.

There are times when saving is WASTEFUL.

It is wasteful when you can get more for your money than you have in the past or will in the future.

Wine, Beer, Health

DeGlane's Training

It is not uncommon in his country, France, to see men and women at 80 and 90 still active and alert enjoying good health.

The government of France, eager to keep its soldiers in good health and to maintain their morale, shipped wine to them at the front where they were resisting the terrific attacks of the German machine.

"I cannot remember the day when I did not have French red wine with my meals. It has made me strong until now I am able to throw any man in the world in a wrestling bout."

This young Hercules, with his philosophical observations, happens also to be a physical training expert in a country where an expert knowledge of physiology is necessary to obtain a license for that work.

If Mr. DeGlane were a native American, familiar with our mental reactions, he could have added something equally important.

It is that independent Americans resent being told that they MUST NOT partake of healthful beverages and that this resentfulness has led to an orgy of lawbreaking which has reached proportions that make thoughtful men shudder for the future of this country.
